

AMERICAN ACADEMY of ACTUARIES

Ron Gebhardtbauer, the Academy's senior pension fellow, is one of the nation's leading experts on Social Security, pension, and retirement issues. He has testified to Congress on Social Security and other issues and has spoken at numerous congressionally-sponsored forums on Social Security around the nation. As the actuarial profession's chief policy liaison on pension issues, he promotes the formulation of sound pension and tax policy by providing Congress and federal regulators with nonpartisan technical assistance.

Before assuming his Academy post in 1997, Gebhardtbauer managed the New York City retirement practice of William M. Mercer, Inc. His public sector experience includes eight years as chief actuary of the federal Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation (PBGC), where he served the more than 1,800 pension plans it administers. As chief pension actuary at the U.S. Office of Personnel Management, he participated in creating the Federal Employee Retirement system, which includes the Thrift Savings Plan.

Gebhardtbauer earned a degree in mathematics at Pennsylvania State University and a master's degree in actuarial science at Northeastern University. He has taught actuarial courses at several schools and to professional groups. He is regularly featured as a speaker at international actuarial meetings and sought for analysis by the news media.

He is a member of the Academy, a fellow of the Society of Actuaries, and a member of the American Society of Pension Professionals and Actuaries. He is chairperson of the Academy's 2005 Federal Agenda Task Force and an enrolled actuary.

The American Academy of Actuaries is a 15,000 member non-profit, non-partisan professional association headquartered in Washington, D.C. Through the Academy, actuaries from the major fields of practice - casualty, health, life and pension - offer their unique skills to the debate about public policy issues. The Academy provides nonpartisan analysis to elected officials, regulators, and the public maintains professional standards for all actuaries, and communicates the value of actuarial work to the news media and the public.
