HISTORY OF THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ACTUARIES

It was on October 25, 1965 that the American Academy of Actuaries was organized as an unincorporated association to serve the actuarial profession in the United States. The corresponding national body in Canada, the Canadian Institute of Actuaries, had been incorporated earlier in the same year.

For many years the profession in North America had consisted of four bodies: the Casualty Actuarial Society, the Conference of Actuaries in Public Practice, the Fraternal Actuarial Association, and the Society of Actuaries. In 1964, the members of those four bodies, recognizing the need for a single body to represent actuaries of all specialties, approved formation of an all-inclusive organization of qualified United States actuaries.

The original plan had been to obtain a federal charter as the first step toward seeking legal recognition of the profession. When it became apparent that this could not be promptly obtained, the Academy was dissolved as an unincorporated association and, on April 29, 1966, was reorganized as a corporation under the Illinois General Not For Profit Corporation Act. Henry F. Rood, whose presidential address to the Society of Actuaries in 1958 had voiced the first formal proposal for a national body, was elected its first President.

In September, 1980 the Fraternal Actuarial Association, one of the four founding organizations, went out of existence. The dissolution resolution indicated that the needs of fraternal actuaries have been increasingly met by other actuarial organizations and that the National Fraternal Congress now provides a forum for fraternal actuaries.

MEMBERSHIP REQUIREMENTS. Academy membership is intended to serve as the hallmark of a qualified actuary in the United States.

All residents who were Fellows (or the equivalent) of the four existing bodies on October 25, 1965, were automatically enrolled as Academy members, subject to their indicated assent by paying the dues. The number of charter members was 1,427.

The Academy immediately set about making its existence known to competent actuaries not eligible as charter members. It was required that any such actuary demonstrate to the Admissions Committee adequate knowledge and skills. Many were admitted by this route, some after passing special proctored examinations. A requirement of seven years of responsible actuarial experience (five years for Fellows by examination of the existing bodies) was imposed.

After January 1, 1970, educational requirements were gradually increased until 1976. In January 1976, an amendment to the Bylaws created a new non-voting class of membership designated Affiliate of the American Academy of Actuaries. This class consisted of non-members of the Academy who became Enrolled Actuaries under the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974 (ERISA), subject to acceptance of their applications by the Academy. Subsequently, in January 1979, the Bylaws were further amended to eliminate the distinction between Affiliates and Members of the American Academy of Actuaries, thereby creating one class of membership designated Members of the American Academy of Actuaries, as well as setting the experience required at three years of responsible actuarial work. Subsequently, the Academy Board set the basic educational requirement at Associateship in the Casualty Actuarial Society or the Society of Actuaries or status as an Enrolled Actuary under ERISA.

Non-residents of the United States can be admitted to membership if they meet the Academy's educational and experience standards, can demonstrate familiarity with United States actuarial practices, and have a need to perform actuarial duties in the United States.

PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT AND PRACTICE. Guides to Professional Conduct were first issued in December 1965, and have since been amplified and supplemented by Opinions. These Guides require the high standard of ethics and responsible performance expected of professionals; the Opinions aim to assist the practicing actuary in dealing with particular situations that arise. The Board of Directors is assisted by separate committees in this field. One of these, the Committee on Guides to Professional Conduct keep the Guides and Opinions current and appropriate; the other, the Committee on Discipline, considers questions that arise about the conduct of any individual member.

LEGAL RECOGNITION. In December 1966, the National Association of Insurance Commissioners adopted a resolution supporting recognized standards of actuarial competence and conduct and urging each commissioner to support the efforts of the Academy to gain official recognition. Many states now have regulations that recognize Academy membership as qualification for signing insurance company annual statements; some have corresponding recognition for public employee retirement systems. The first state to act was Indiana, which provided by a 1968 law for certification of actuaries by a state board. The general pattern followed in other states has been issuance of administrative orders or regulations.

In 1975 the responsibility expected of actuaries was spelled out by a new requirement that the actuary who signs a life insurance company annual statement express an opinion on the actuarial elements including an opinion on the adequacy of reserves. The Academy responded with recommendations to the profession on how this responsibility should be met.

In 1979 a similar requirement was added to the property and liability insurance company annual statement, except that the requirement is at the discretion of the domiciliary insurance commissioner. Again the Academy responded with appropriate recommendations to the profession.

In the pension field the 1974 legislation, ERISA, has established extensive and specific standards for actuarial reports, for disclosure and fiduciary relationships, and for the qualifications of actuaries in pension work.

EXPRESSIONS OF PROFESSIONAL OPINION. The first major influence of the Academy beyond the boundaries of the profession was in its response, beginning in 1972, to the drafts of guides for audits of stock life insurance companies by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. This cooperative endeavor has led to regular and close association between the actuarial and accounting professions.

The Academy is steadily promulgating Recommendations, and Interpretations thereof, for use by actuaries in preparing financial reports for insurance companies and pension plans. The Guides to Professional Conduct and related Opinions require that actuaries take these pronouncements into consideration and be prepared to support use of assumptions or methods that vary from them.

JOINT ACTIVITIES OF ACTUARIAL BODIES. The North American actuarial bodies cooperate in many ways, largely through joint sponsorship of actuarial examinations and through joint committees as needed. In December 1972 the Academy was instrumental in launching an informal body, the Council of Presidents, to foster even greater understanding and common purpose. In 1976 the actuarial organizations jointly formed the Actuarial Education and Research Fund to foster the growth of basic actuarial research throughout the profession and to arrange for necessary financing of such research.

ADMINISTRATION. From the outset the Academy shared administrative facilities with the Society of Actuaries in Chicago, which have since been broadened to serve the Conference of Actuaries in Public Practice also. A major step to increase the value and influence of the Academy was taken in January 1976 when Stephen G. Kellison was appointed Executive Director with headquarters in Washington, D.C. Kellison, a member of the Academy, will coordinate Academy activities in the public sector. The Washington office staff was further strengthened by the appointment of a full-time staff lawyer in September 1979.

MEETINGS. The Academy holds its annual meeting in the fall of each year in conjunction with the annual meeting of one of the founding organizations. Starting in 1976 the Academy and the Conference of Actuaries in Public Practice have jointly sponsored a series of special meetings for Enrolled Actuaries. These meetings have provided an organizational focus for the concerns and interests of all Enrolled Actuaries.

PUBLICATIONS.The Academy continues to expand its scope of publications. The Academy publishes annually a Year Book and a supplementary List of Members by Business Connection. In 1980 a tabulation of Enrolled Actuaries Listed Geographically was printed. During 1977 the frequency of publication of the Newsletter was increased to bimonthly. Also, the Enrolled Actuaries Report, originally a special section of the Newsletter, has been turned into a separate publication. Finally, the Journal has been published as a record of each annual meeting since the 1975 annual meeting. Since January 1, 1977, the Journal has also contained official statements of the Academy.

COMMITTEE ON LONG RANGE PLANNING

Recognizing that the responsibility of the actuarial profession in the United States is to fulfill public needs, the charge of the Committee on Long Range Planning is:

1. To identify the requirements of the actuarial profession as a whole to fulfill public needs, i.e. needs of both the public in general and the needs of its own members;
2. To define the role that the Academy should play in satisfying these requirements; and
3. To develop a plan of action for the Academy to utilize effectively its resources in order to satisfy these requirements.

COMMITTEE ON ACCREDITATION

This committee is concerned with the recognition of the actuary in statutes and regulations as a professional person subject to qualification standards. A primary function of the committee is to monitor proposed legislation and regulations that specify, or should specify, that certain acts be performed by an actuary. If as the result of such monitoring a proposed statute or regulation is found by the committee to be deficient in its recognition of the professional status of the actuary, the committee will initiate action to attempt to remove such deficiency.

FREDERICK W. KILBOURNE, Chairman

Note: Committee membership to be announced.

COMMITTEE ON GUIDES TO PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

This Committee is responsible for drafting Guides to Professional Conduct and Opinions as to Professional Conduct, and also for revising or recommending the elimination of existing Guides and Opinions for action by the Board of Directors. The Committee answers inquiries about professional conduct, whether of a general or specific nature.

COMMITTEES ON FINANCIAL REPORTING PRINCIPLES

These Committees examine the actuarial considerations applicable to the financial reporting for insurance and develop guidelines for the practicing actuary.

In accordance with procedures prescribed by the Board of Directors, each of the Committees may publish Recommendations which should be taken into consideration by the actuary, and release Interpretations which do not have the force of Recommendations.

The role of the General Committee is primarily consultative and advisory to the other two Committees, both of which report directly to the Board of Directors on their identified specialty.

COMMITTEE ON PENSION ACTUARIAL PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICES

The function of this Committee is to examine and develop actuarial principles and practices for actuarial calculations with respect to pension plans.

In accordance with procedures prescribed by the Board of Directors, the Committee may publish Recommendations which should be taken into consideration by actuaries preparing actuarial calculations for pension plans. An actuary who makes use of an assumption or method in conflict with any Recommendation should be prepared to substantiate its use. The Committee, on its own authority, may release Interpretations and other communications which do not have the force of Recommendations.

GUIDELINES FOR APPOINTMENTS TO COMMITTEES

PREAMBLE

In accordance with the Bylaws of the American Academy of Actuaries, the President appoints committees authorized by the Board. To aid the President in making such appointments the Board adopted the following guidelines with this preamble at its meeting on October 31, 1980. These guidelines reflect the Board's intention to involve as many members as possible in committee activities without sacrificing continuity. However, the effectiveness of committee work is paramount and as a consequence strict adherence to the guidelines is not expected, particularly with respect to committees that interface regularly with other professions and/or government.

Committees for which specific appointment rules are established by the Board (e.g. Nominating Committee) are exempt from the guidelines. Appointments to joint committees and liaison appointments are subject to the guidelines applicable to standing committees, although certain of the liaison appointments must be Board members pursuant to Academy policy and agreements with other organizations.

GUIDELINES

(1) All members of the Academy are eligible to serve on committees.

(2) An officer of the Academy should not serve on any committee except in an ex officio capacity.

(3) A person should be chairman of a standing committee for no more than three years and should retire from the committee after serving as chairman.

(4) A person should remain on a standing committee for no more than three years unless such person becomes chairman by the end of that period.

(5) In general, a person should not serve concurrently on more than one standing committee.

(6) In general, a person appointed to a task force or a special committee is expected to serve until the task force or special committee is discharged.

BYLAWS
AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ACTUARIES
(THE ACADEMY)

(A CORPORATION ORGANIZED UNDER THE ILLINOIS GENERAL NOT FOR PROFIT CORPORATION ACT) AS ADOPTED APRIL 29, 1966 AND LAST AMENDED SEPT., 1980.

ARTICLE I
MEMBERSHIP

SECTION 1. Members. Individuals having membership in the Academy shall be called "members."

Members shall be entitled to attend meetings of the Academy, vote, hold office, serve as elected Directors, make nominations, serve on committees, and generally exercise the rights of full membership. They are authorized to designate themselves as "members" of the American Academy of Actuaries and to append to their names the initials M.A.A.A. In all references to members, words implying the masculine gender shall include the feminine gender.

SECTION 2. Requirements for Admission to Membership. Any person may apply for membership and shall become a member by meeting the requirements contained in this section.

A. Application. Each candidate for admission must submit a written application which shall include a résumé of his education, background, and experience, the names of two references who are members, and such additional information as the Admissions Committee may request.

B. Education. Each candidate shall have passed, or have received credit for, the examinations prescribed from time to time by the Board of Directors, hereinafter called the "Board".

C. Experience. Each candidate must, at the date of application, have had at least three years of experience in responsible actuarial work. "Responsible actuarial work" is defined as work which has required knowledge and skill in solving practical actuarial problems in any of the following fields: life and health insurance involving individual policies, group insurance, social insurance, pensions, or property and liability insurance.

D. References. Evidence of character and professional integrity of the candidate shall have been educed by references from two members who have known the candidate for at least eighteen months or from other sources. If the application is rejected on the basis of evidence of lack of character or professional integrity, the candidate may appeal to the Board. The procedures for the conduct of such appeal shall be as prescribed by the Board.

E. Nonresidents. If the candidate is not a resident of the United States, he must meet such other requirements as are prescribed by the Board.

F. Approval. Each application shall be acted upon by the Admissions Committee and reviewed by the Executive Committee. A candidate's application is accepted (1) if approved by at least 75 per cent of the whole Admissions Committee and confirmed by at least 75 per cent of the whole Executive Committee, (2) if approved by less than 75 per cent of the whole Admissions Committee and confirmed by a unanimous vote of the whole Executive Committee, or (3) if disapproved by the Admissions Committee but approved by a unanimous vote of the whole Executive Committee.

ARTICLE II
MEETINGS OF THE MEMBERS

There shall be an annual meeting of the members each fall at such time and place as the Board shall designate.

Special meetings may be called by the Board. Upon request of not less than 5 per cent of the members, the President shall call a meeting of the members. At all meetings fifty members shall constitute a quorum. Notice of a meeting, specifying the place, date, and hour of the meeting, shall be given not less than twenty nor more than forty days before each meeting.

ARTICLE III
BOARD OF DIRECTORS

SECTION 1. Composition. The Board shall consist of twenty-eight Directors, comprising the eight Officers, the two immediate Past-Presidents and eighteen elected Directors.

SECTION 2. Election and Term of Office. Each year the members shall elect six Directors to serve for a period of three years. Candidates receiving the greatest number of votes shall be elected. A retiring elected Director other than one who was elected to fill a vacancy, shall not be eligible for re-election as an elected Director at the annual meeting at which his term expires. A Past-President shall not be eligible for election as an elected Director at the time at which his ex-officio membership on the Board as Past-President expires. If a vacancy occurs among the elected Directors, including a vacancy created by the election of an elected Director to an office, it may be filled for the unexpired term by majority vote of the whole Board. The term of office of an elected Director shall begin at the close of the annual meeting of the Academy in the calendar year of his election and shall continue until the close of the annual meeting at the end of the term for which he was elected and until his successor shall have been elected.

SECTION 3. Meetings. There shall be an annual meeting of the Board within sixty days prior to the annual meeting of the Academy. Special meetings of the Board shall be called whenever the President or at least five members of the Board so request.

Meetings of the Board may be held either within or outside the state of Illinois. Notice of the meetings of the Board shall be given not less than ten days nor more than thirty days before the meeting, except in the event of a meeting of the Board following the annual meeting of the Academy, in which event newly elected directors shall be given notice of such meeting of the Board as promptly as possible. Such notice to newly elected directors may be given personally, by telephone, by mail, or by telegraph.

Any action required to be taken at a meeting of the Board may be taken without a meeting if a consent in writing, setting forth the action so taken, shall be signed by all of the members of the Board.

SECTION 4. Quorum. At meetings of the Board, a majority of the members of the Board shall constitute a quorum.

SECTION 5. Duties and Powers. The Board shall have, in addition to the powers and authority expressly conferred upon it by these Bylaws, the right, power, and authority to exercise all such powers and to do all such acts and things as may be appropriate to carry out the purposes of the Academy. Without prejudice to the general powers so conferred, the Board shall have the following specific powers:

a) To act in accordance with the provisions of the Articles of Incorporation of the Academy and the laws of the state of Illinois.

b) To establish the location of the offices of the Academy.

c) To invest and administer the funds of the Academy.

d) To arrange an annual audit of the accounts of the Treasurer.

e) To prescribe examinations and other requirements for admission, as provided in Article I, Section 2, of the Bylaws.

f) To elect the Officers of the Academy.

g) To authorize such committees as it may deem necessary for the conduct of the affairs of the Academy.

ARTICLE IV
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

During any interim between meetings of the Board, the business of the Academy shall be conducted by an Executive Committee comprised of the Officers and the immediate Past-President. The Executive Committee shall have such powers as may be provided by these Bylaws or as may be delegated to it by the Board, except the specific powers enumerated as (b), (d), (e), (f) and (g) in Section 5 of Article III.

ARTICLE V
OFFICERS

SECTION 1. Officers. The Officers of the Academy, all of whom shall be members, shall consist of a President, a President-Elect, four Vice-Presidents, a Secretary, and a Treasurer.

SECTION 2. Election and Term of Office. At each annual meeting of the Board, the Directors present, by a vote of a majority of the whole Board shall elect, separately and in the order named, a President-Elect, two or more Vice Presidents, a Secretary, and a Treasurer.

At the annual meeting of the Board, if either (a) the President-Elect has succeeded the President and has served in that capacity for six months or more by reason of the office of President becoming vacant or (b) the office of the President-Elect is vacant, except in the case where the President-Elect has succeeded to the office of the President and has served in that capacity for less than six months, the Directors by a vote of a majority of the whole Board shall, prior to the election of the President-Elect, elect a President to serve from the close of the first subsequent annual meeting of the Academy until the close of the second subsequent annual meeting of the Academy.

Except as hereinafter provided, the President-Elect, having been so elected at an annual meeting of the Board, shall commence his term as President-Elect at the close of the first subsequent annual meeting of the Academy and shall automatically succeed the President at the close of the second subsequent annual meeting of the Academy, and he shall serve as the President until the close of the third subsequent annual meeting of the Academy. In the event the office of President becomes vacant, the President-Elect shall automatically succeed to fill the vacancy for the unexpired term. If the President-Elect so succeeds the President and serves in that capacity for less than six months prior to the close of the first subsequent annual meeting of the Academy following his succession to the Presidency, he shall further serve as President until the close of the second subsequent annual meeting of the Academy.

The term of two of the Vice Presidents elected at each annual meeting of the Board shall be from the close of the first subsequent annual meeting of the Academy until the close of the third subsequent annual meeting of the Academy. The term of any other Vice Presidents elected at each annual meeting of the Board shall be from the close of the first subsequent annual meeting of the Academy until the close of the second subsequent annual meeting of the Academy. The terms of the Secretary and the Treasurer elected at each annual meeting of the Board shall be from the close of the first subsequent annual meeting of the Academy until the close of the second subsequent annual meeting of the Academy.

Except as provided above, a retiring President shall thereafter be permanently ineligible for election for another term as President or President-Elect.

A retiring Vice-President shall not be eligible for re-election as a Vice-President at the meeting at which his term expires.

Each Officer shall hold office for the term for which he is elected and until his successor shall have been elected.

In the event of vacancy in the office of both the President and President-Elect, the Board shall by majority vote of the whole Board elect a member to fill the vacancy for the unexpired term of the President.

In the event a vacancy occurs among the Vice-Presidents, or in the office of Secretary or Treasurer, the Board shall by majority vote of the whole Board elect a member to fill the vacancy for the unexpired term.

ARTICLE VI
DUTIES OF OFFICERS

SECTION 1. President. The President shall preside at the meetings of the Board and of the Academy. He shall appoint committees authorized by the Board. He may sign with the Treasurer, or any other person authorized by the Board, contracts or other instruments which the Board has authorized to be executed.

SECTION 2. President-Elect. The President-Elect shall have such duties as may be assigned to him by the President or by the Board. In the absence of the President, or in the event of his inability or refusal to act, the President-Elect shall perform the duties of the President's office.

SECTION 3. Vice-Presidents. Each of the Vice-Presidents shall have such duties as may be assigned to him by the President or by the Board.

SECTION 4. Secretary. The Secretary shall record and file minutes of all meetings of the Board, give all notices, be custodian of the corporate records of the Academy, and in general shall perform all customary duties incident to the office of Secretary.

SECTION 5. Treasurer. The Treasurer shall keep a register of the members, have charge of the preparation and publication of any Year Book which may be published, have general supervision of any arrangements for holding examinations, have charge and custody of all funds and securities, collect dues, pay bills, prepare financial statements, and in general perform all customary duties incident to the office of Treasurer. The Treasurer shall give a bond for the faithful discharge of his duties, the cost of which shall be paid by the Academy.

ARTICLE VII
FINANCES AND CONTRACTS

SECTION 1. Dues. Except as hereinafter provided, each member shall pay such dues for each calendar year as may be established by the Board. Such dues shall be payable as of January 1 of the calendar year. At the time when dues are payable, any member who has become totally disabled or who, having attained age 62, notifies the Treasurer in writing that he has retired from active work or who has attained age 70 shall be granted exemption from the payment of dues by the Executive Committee.

It shall be the duty of the Treasurer to cause to be notified by mail any member whose dues may be six months in arrears and to accompany such notice by a copy of this Section. If dues remain unpaid, such person shall, on the date which falls three months after the date of mailing such notice, cease to be a member of the Academy for all purposes other than with respect to any penalty or other action determined under disciplinary procedures as provided in Article VIII, Section 2, relating to conduct prior to such date. Reinstatement as a member shall be subject to such conditions as the Board may prescribe.

SECTION 2. Publications. The Board shall determine the extent of distribution of publications of the Academy and the fees or prices to be charged any classes of recipients.

SECTION 3. Contracts. The Board may authorize any Officer or agent to enter into any contract or execute and deliver any instrument in the name or on behalf of the Academy.

SECTION 4. Checks. All checks, drafts, or other orders for the payment of money, notes, or other evidences of indebtedness shall be signed by such Officer or agent of the Academy as shall from time to time be determined by the Board.

SECTION 5. Deposits. All funds of the Academy not otherwise employed or invested shall be deposited to the credit of the Academy in such banks, trust companies, or other depositories as the Board may select.

ARTICLE VIII
RESIGNATION AND DISCIPLINE OF MEMBERS

SECTION 1. Resignation. Any member who is not in default in payment of dues and against whom no complaints or charges are pending may at any time file his resignation in writing with the Treasurer, and, if accepted by the Board, it shall become effective as of the date it was filed. Notwithstanding the foregoing, the Board may in its discretion permit the resignation of a member against whom a complaint or charge is pending. The Board, on written application of any member who has resigned, may reinstate such member subject to such conditions as it may prescribe.

SECTION 2. Discipline. There shall be a standing Committee on Discipline of not fewer than fifteen Committee members, one of whom shall be chairman.

The Committee shall have the power to consider and take action, as herein provided, with respect to all questions which may arise as to the conduct of a member of the Academy in the member's relationship to the Academy or its members or in the member's professional practice, or affecting the interests of the actuarial profession. The Committee may, on its own initiative, investigate and take action with respect to any such question, and may also receive and hear any complaint relating to the conduct of a member preferred in writing. In considering any question, the Committee may consult confidentially with members of the Academy who have experience relevant to the matter under consideration.

In the course of dealing with questions and complaints relating to the conduct of members, the chairman may appoint, from among the members of the Academy, at least one of whom shall be a member of the Committee, with the consent of the President, investigating committees and disciplinary boards vested with the following powers:

a) Investigating committees empowered to investigate questions and complaints and to propose charges against a member.

b) Disciplinary boards empowered to hear evidence relating to questions and complaints and to recommend to the Committee findings with respect to such evidence.

If, after any such investigation by the Committee or an investigating committee, the Committee shall deem the matter investigated to be of sufficient importance, written charges, predicated thereon, stating plainly the charge against the member, together with a notice of the time and place where the Committee or a disciplinary board will meet for consideration thereof, shall be served upon the person concerned, not less than forty-five days before the date of such meeting, either personally or by certified mail, or in such other manner as the Committee may direct.

In any hearing before the Committee or a disciplinary board, a member proceeded against shall have the right to appear personally and by counsel, to examine the evidence presented, to examine adverse witnesses, and to present witnesses and evidence in his or her behalf. Any member preferring a complaint may appear personally and by counsel. Witnesses called in the course of hearings involving conduct shall vouch for the truth of their statements on their word of honor. A written transcript shall be made of the proceedings in any hearing for submission to each member of the Committee. The Committee or disciplinary board shall decide all questions of evidence. The Board may retain counsel for the assistance of the Committee.

Whenever, in the course of any hearing under this Section, evidence shall be presented upon which another charge or charges against the respondent might be made, it shall not be necessary for the Committee or disciplinary board to prepare and serve such additional charge or charges on the respondent, but the Committee or disciplinary board may, after reasonable notice to the respondent and an opportunity for the respondent to answer and be heard, proceed to the consideration of such additional charge or charges as if they had been made and served at the time of service of the original charge or charges, and may render such decision or recommendation upon all such charges as may be justified by the evidence in the case.

In all proceedings under this Section, the Committee shall decide whether or not misconduct has occurred. Action by the Committee other than dismissal of the charges shall be taken only upon the affirmative vote of at least two-thirds of the members of the Committee. If the Committee finds that misconduct has occurred, it may, on its own initiative, warn or admonish the member or recommend to the Board of Directors that the member be reprimanded, suspended, or expelled. If such a recommendation is made, the member involved shall have the right to appear personally and by counsel before the Board to explain why the Committee's recommendation should not be followed. Board action reprimanding, suspending, or expelling a member requires an affirmative vote of a majority of the whole Board. The Board may, by the vote of a majority of the whole Board, impose a lesser penalty than that recommended or adjudged by the Committee on Discipline.

A member against whom an order of suspension or expulsion has been rendered shall, upon application to the Board within thirty days thereafter, be entitled to appeal to the members of the Academy upon the following conditions:

a) All rights and privileges of membership status shall be suspended during the pendency of the appeal.

b) The notice of appeal shall be in writing and shall stipulate that the appealing member consents to the mailing to the members of a transcript of the evidence and copies of exhibits in the form approved by a majority of the Board.

c) The appealing member shall, within ten days after an invoice of the amount due is sent to him, deposit with the Treasurer the cost of transcribing and printing the transcript of the evidence and copies of any and all exhibits. In the event the decision of the Board shall be set aside, the Treasurer shall return to the appealing member the amount of the deposit. Otherwise the deposit shall be retained by the Academy.

In the event of an appeal to the members, the decision of the Board may be affirmed, modified, or set aside by the vote of a majority of the members present and voting at an annual or special meeting of the Academy.

The Board may, in its discretion, reinstate to membership status at any time a member suspended or expelled under this Section, provided in the event the suspension or expulsion had been affirmed by the members, the reinstatement shall not take effect unless and until confirmed by a vote of a majority of the members present and voting at a meeting of the Academy.

Except as otherwise provided, all proceedings under this Section shall be deemed confidential and kept secret. The Board, however, shall notify the members of its action in all instances in which the Board orders the suspension or expulsion of a member. Such notification shall not be given until the time to appeal has expired or, in the event of an appeal, until a majority of the members present at the meeting of the Academy have voted in favor of suspension or expulsion. At the same time notification is given to the members, the Board may also give notice of such suspension or expulsion to such newspapers or journals as it may select.

In the event of subsequent reinstatement of the member, the Board shall give notice of such action to the members of the Academy and to any newspapers or journals previously advised by the Board of the member's suspension or expulsion.

ARTICLE IX
NOTICE

The requirement that notice be given to members or other persons shall be satisfied when a letter has been deposited in a United States Post Office mailbox addressed to the last known address of such person.

Article X
INDEMNIFICATION

Each person who at any time shall serve, or shall have served as an Officer, member of the Board, committee member, or member of any disciplinary board of the Academy (and his heirs, executors, administrators, and personal representatives) shall be indemnified by the Academy against all costs and expenses (including but not limited to legal fees, amounts of judgments paid, and amounts paid in settlement) reasonably incurred in connection with the defense of any claim, action, suit, or proceeding, whether civil, criminal, administrative, or other, in which he or they may be involved by virtue of such person being or having been an Officer, member of the Board, committee member, or member of any disciplinary board of the Academy, or in connection with any appeal therein; provided, however, that in the event of a settlement the indemnification herein provided shall apply only when the Board approves such settlement; and provided further that such indemnity shall not be operative with respect to any matter as to which such person shall have been finally adjudged liable in such claim, action, suit, or proceeding on account of his own willful misconduct.

The rights accruing to any person under this Article shall be without prejudice to any rights or benefits given by the Board inconsistent therewith in special cases and shall not exclude any other rights or benefits to which he may be lawfully entitled.

Article XI
USE OF FINANCIAL RESOURCES: DISSOLUTION

The funds of the Academy shall be devoted exclusively to the purposes stated in paragraph 5 of the Articles of Incorporation. No part of the net earnings of the Academy shall ever inure in whole or in part to the benefit of any member or individual. If the Academy is dissolved, all of its remaining assets shall be transferred to one or more organizations organized and operated exclusively for purposes similar to those of the Academy.

Article XII
AMENDMENTS

Amendments to the Bylaws may be proposed either by a vote of two-thirds of the Directors present at a duly convened meeting of the Board or by written request of not less than three percent of the members. The Board shall specify a reasonable period of time within which the proposed amendment shall be transmitted by the Secretary to the members by mail, and the time for votes to be mailed by the members to the Secretary. Such proposed amendment shall be accompanied by an appropriate discussion of the issues and it shall become effective ten days following the end of the voting period upon the affirmative vote of two-thirds of the members voting.

PRESCRIBED EXAMINATIONS

The Academy Board, in accordance with Article I, Section 2B of the By-laws prescribes examinations as follows:

A candidate who has attained by examination the indicated status listed below shall be deemed to have met the education requirements for admission to membership:

Associateship in:	Casualty Actuarial Society Society of Actuaries
Fellowship in:	Canadian Institute of Actuaries Conference of Actuaries in Public Practice Faculty of Actuaries in Scotland Institute of Actuaries

Enrolled Actuary under subtitle C of title III of the Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

In those cases where familiarity with actuarial practices and principles in the United States cannot be assumed, the Admissions Committee is empowered to call for evidence of such familiarity.

GUIDES TO PROFESSIONAL CONDUCT

Professional conduct involves the actuary's own sense of integrity and his professional relationship with those to whom he renders services, with his employer, with other members of the profession, and with the world at large. In all these relationships every member of the profession is concerned with his own behavior and, as the good name of the profession is the concern of all its members, with the behavior of his colleagues.

In order to assist the Board of Directors and the Academy in achieving the objectives of the Academy and, more importantly, to guide an actuary of the Academy when he encounters questions of professional conduct as an actuary, the following "Guides to Professional Conduct" have been prepared by order of, and approved by, the Board. In all references to actuaries and members, words implying the masculine gender shall include the feminine gender. As is true of codes of ethics generally, these Guides deal with precepts and principles only. They are not precise rules and are subject to interpretations in relation to the variety of circumstances that occur in practice. Any actuary wishing advice regarding the application of these Guides to a particular set of facts is urged to consult the Chairman of the Committee on Guides to Professional Conduct.

   a) The actuary will act in a manner to uphold the dignity of the actuarial profession and to fulfill its responsibility to the public.

   b) The actuary will bear in mind that he acts as an expert when he gives actuarial advice, and he will give such advice only when he is qualified to do so.

   c) The actuary will not provide actuarial service for or associate professionally with any person or organization where there is an evident possibility that his service may be used in a manner that is contrary to the public interest or the interest of his profession or in a manner to evade the law.

2. Relationship of the Actuary to His Client or Employer.

   a) Matters will be so ordered that all concerned are clear as to who is the actuary's client or employer and in what capacity the actuary is serving his client or employer.

   b) The actuary will act for each client or employer with scrupulous attention to the trust and confidence that the relationship implies and will have due regard for the confidential nature of his work.

   c) The actuary will recognize his ethical responsibilities to the person or organization whose actions may be influenced by his actuarial opinions or findings. When it is not feasible for the actuary to render his opinions or findings directly to such person or organization, he will act in such a manner as to leave no doubt that he is the source of the opinions or findings and to indicate clearly his personal availability to provide supplemental advice and explanation. If such opinions or findings are submitted to another actuary for review, either he or the other actuary will be available for supplemental advice and explanation.

3. Nature of the Actuary's Responsibility to His Client or Employer.

In any situation in which there is or may be a conflict of interest involving the actuary's service, whether one or more clients or employers are involved, the actuary will not perform such service if the conflict makes or is likely to make it difficult for him to act independently. Even if there is no question as to his ability to act independently, he will not act unless there has been a full disclosure of the situation to all parties involved and the parties have expressly agreed to his performance of the service.

4. Calculations and Recommendations.

a) The actuary will customarily include in any report or certificate quoting actuarial costs, reserves, or liabilities a statement or reference describing or clearly identifying the data and the actuarial methods and assumptions employed.

b) The actuary will exercise his best judgment to ensure that any calculations or recommendations made by him or under his direction are based on sufficient and reliable data, that any assumptions made are adequate and appropriate, and that the methods employed are consistent with the sound principles established by precedents or common usage within the profession.

c) If, nevertheless, a client or employer requests the actuary to prepare a study which in his opinion deviates from this practice, any resulting report, recommendation, or certificate submitted by him will include an appropriate and explicit qualification of his findings.

d) The actuary who renders an opinion as to the adequacy of life and health insurance reserves shall be guided by principles established by or in common use within the profession; the actuary will at all times recognize that the reserves required by statute or the regulations of insurance departments constitute a minimum legal test of adequacy for the protection of policyholders. When an actuary characterizes reserves as adequate, he shall either (i) assure himself that they meet any applicable statutory or regulatory standards or (ii) clearly qualify his characterization in this respect, including an explicit statement as to whether the reserves meet such statutory or regulatory standards.

5. Advertising and Relations with Other Actuaries.

   a) The actuary will neither engage in nor condone any advertising or other activity which can reasonably be regarded as being likely to attract professional work unfairly, or where the tone, form, and content are not strictly professional.

   b) The actuary will conduct his professional activities on a high plane. He will avoid unjustifiable or improper criticism of others and will not attempt to injure maliciously the professional reputation of any other actuary. He will recognize that there is substantial room for honest differences of opinion on many matters.

6. Remuneration.

   The actuary will make full and timely disclosure to a client as to all direct and indirect compensation that he or his firm may receive from all sources in relation to any assignment the member or his firm undertakes for the client.

   The actuary will use a designation dependent upon elective or appointive qualification within the Academy, such as "President," "Director," or "Member of the Committee on Education and Examination," only when he is acting in such capacity on behalf of the Academy.

NOTE: Guides to Professional Conduct are continually under review by the Committee on Guides to Professional Conduct. Promulgation of the Guides is through authority of the Board of Directors. The Guides in their present format were adopted in 1969, had one revision in 1973, and changes not in substance were made as of January, 1976 concurrently with changes in the Bylaws.

The Bylaws of the American Academy of Actuaries place in the Board of Directors the power to consider and take action with respect to questions which may arise as to the conduct of an actuary who is a member in his relations to the Academy or other actuaries, or in his profession, or in the practice thereof, or affecting the interests of the actuarial profession. In doing so, the Bylaws grant certain disciplinary powers to the Board in case it determines that misconduct has occurred.

The Board names a Committee on Guides to Professional Conduct to have continuous oversight of the Guides to Professional Conduct, and to recommend revision or repeal of specific guides and also new guides. The Committee also issues interpretive Opinions on the Guides. Under a new procedure, established by the Board of Directors in 1976, after preliminary approval by the Board, an Exposure Draft of any new or revised Guide or Opinion is circulated to the membership for comments, and a final version may then be published after approval by the Board.

The Committee answers inquiries about professional conduct, including both general inquiries and those relating to particular situations but not to a named actuary. (Complaints and questions involving named members should be directed to the Chairman of the Committee on Discipline or to the President rather than to this Committee.)

The Opinions issued to date are set forth herein. All Opinions of the American Academy of Actuaries are applicable with respect to practice in the United States, and are designated "A." Each of the following actuarial organizations in the United States, namely the Casualty Actuarial Society, Conference of Actuaries in Public Practice, Fraternal Actuarial Association and Society of Actuaries, and in Canada, the Canadian Institute of Actuaries, has its own designation. There is a general understanding among these actuarial organizations that all will use the same Opinion Number when dealing with the same subject. Through an exchange of drafts the Opinions on a subject may be identical or nearly so. This may not always be the case, however. In all references to actuaries and members, words implying the masculine gender shall include the feminine gender.

OPINION A-1: PROFESSIONAL RELATIONSHIPS

INTRODUCTION

The following statement by Francis Bacon is often quoted:* "I hold every man a debtor to his profession, from the which as men of course do seek to receive countenance and profit, so ought they of duty to endeavor themselves by way of amends to be a help and ornament thereunto." Much of a professional person's knowledge comes from what has been contributed to the profession by others before him. This does not cease with the past, however. There must be continual interchange of information and opinion which enriches the total knowledge within a profession. Ideas and things that have been learned from experience are not patented. Through professional articles and speeches, members of a profession contribute from their knowledge to the improvement of the group. Such cooperation is essential so that the whole profession may keep up with the rapid changes of the business world and the demands of the profession. An individual actuary's particular experience must be augmented by what is provided by others in the profession in order to develop sources of knowledge of the theory and techniques of the profession.

This leads to the necessity, as well as the desirability, of there being cordial relations and mutual confidence among the members of a profession. This contributes to the advancement of the profession and to the improved quality of its service to its clients. Undue rivalry between the members of a profession would weaken and destroy the very things which distinguish a profession from commercial business. The usual promotional procedures of a commercial business—such things as self-laudatory advertising, solicitation, obtaining business solely on a price basis—are not suitable to a profession. A characteristic of, and a satisfaction to, the professional person is to have the respect and good opinion of his fellow practitioners. Mutual confidence is built on adherence to ethical conduct and by the observation of professional etiquette and courtesy.

Competence and concern for clients require that a professional person be ready to refer work to specialists or consult with them, where desirable. He should not feel that, in so doing, he might lose his client to the colleague so consulted. Similarly, if an actuary is requested by a client of another actuary to do work which supplements such actuary's work, or is of a different nature, the client's actuary should be able to expect professional courtesy from the other actuary.

PREAMBLE TO GUIDES

"Professional conduct involves the actuary's own sense of integrity and his professional relationship with those to whom he renders services, with his employer, with other members of the profession, and with the world at large. In all these relationships every member of the profession is concerned with his own behavior and, as the good name of the profession is the concern of all its members, with the behavior of his colleagues."

GENERAL OPINION

In the opinion of the Committee, an actuary, as a professional person, will show professional courtesy toward fellow actuaries and their clients. It is recognized that competition exists in the profession, since clients are free to change advisers, and it should be possible for the public to know what services are available. However, for the members of a profession to practice aggressive competition would be to destroy the desirable characteristics of a profession.

The Committee believes, therefore, that advertising in which the tone, form, and content are inappropriate to a profession and solicitation of clients in a manner which is discourteous or unprofessional are injurious to the profession of which the actuary is a member and upon which he depends for his professional stature. Thus, aggressive solicitation of clients and "raiding" another's clients are unprofessional and out of keeping with the Guides to Professional Conduct. The Committee also believes that underpricing of services and underestimating the amount of services needed for a specific assignment, when knowingly done in order to attract business, are unprofessional practices which conflict with the basic principles underlying the Guides as set forth in the Preamble to the Guides.

In extension of the general opinion the Committee expresses the following opinions on specific subjects.

Opinion a—DISAGREEMENTS AND DIFFERENCES OF OPINION

Because of the nature of actuarial work, differences of opinions among actuaries are bound to arise, particularly in choices of assumptions and valuation methods. Guides 1(a) and 5(b) are applicable. It is expected that professional etiquette and courtesy will be unfailingly observed in discussion of such differences, whether directly between actuaries or in observations made to a client by one actuary on the work of another.

If an actuary believes that a material difference of findings has been engendered by incompetent work or other misconduct on the part of another actuary, the procedures set forth in the Bylaws (Article VIII, Section 2, Discipline) can be invoked. Charges of incompetent work or other misconduct should not be circulated except to proper legal authorities, or in private communication to appropriate legal authorities or to those in the profession charged with supervision and judgment of such matters, unless such violations have been formally stated by those authorities to have occurred.

An actuary in the regular course of his employment or engagement may encounter a situation such that the best interest of his employer or client would be served by the actuary's setting out an alternative opinion to that expressed by another actuary together with an explanation of the factors which in his judgment lend support to the alternative opinion. Guide 5(b) and this Opinion should not be construed as preventing him from expressing such alternative to the employer or client.

Opinion b—RESPONSIBILITY OF ACTUARY IF ILLEGAL OR UNPROFESSIONAL ACTS BY ANOTHER ACTUARY ARE SUSPECTED

An actuary may encounter reason to suspect that another actuary may have acted illegally or unprofessionally or may have otherwise engaged in misconduct in the course of his professional duties. In such case the actuary may wish to confer with the Academy's Committee on Discipline and, if considered appropriate, the procedure set forth in the Bylaws (Article VIII, Section 2, Discipline) can be invoked. In such a case the issue may be a matter of law as well as of ethics. An actuary faced with a decision whether or not to invoke that procedure should seek legal counsel; he may face the possibility of a defamation suit if he acts, and he could face the possibility of criminal or civil charges if he does not act.

For a professional to condone serious fault can be as harmful to the public interest or to the profession as to commit it. An actuary who condones another actuary's misconduct is himself guilty of misconduct. Ethical conduct, in the true sense, is not defined solely by admonitions and prohibitions but requires commitment to honorable behavior even at the possible sacrifice of personal advantage or convenience. The Academy's Committee on Discipline stands ready to confer with any actuary who has a serious professional problem of ethics and needs guidance whether the problem concerns a member or another actuary who is not a member.

Opinion c—CHANGE OF ACTUARY, OR APPOINTMENT OF ADDITIONAL ACTUARY

An actuary may provide service to any principal (any present or prospective client or employer) who requests it, even though such principal may be served by another actuary in the same matter, or he may succeed another actuary at the request of the principal. A principal has an indisputable right to choose his professional advisor. He may have legitimate reasons to wish to change his advisor or to retain more than one advisor in the same matter. The purpose of a new appointment may not always be above criticism, however, and an existing advisor's freedom to fulfill his duties in a professional way must be safeguarded.

Accordingly, if an actuary is invited to advise a principal for whom he knows, or has grounds for supposing that, another actuary is already acting in a professional capacity with respect to the same matter, or has recently so acted, it would normally be a professional courtesy and a prudent procedure to consult the other actuary, both to prepare himself adequately for the assignment and to make an informed judgment whether there are professional considerations which might affect his services.

The prospective new or additional actuary should request the principal's consent to such consultation. The withholding of such consent could be a material factor affecting the propriety of accepting the appointment.

In such consultation, the relevant items for discussion may include (1) pertinent background and past history with respect to the assignment; (2) the reasons for the change; (3) any disagreements between management and the other actuary as to matters of actuarial concern; and (4) whether there are any professional reasons why the invitation ought not to be accepted or any professional difficulties to which acceptance might give rise, such as any actuarial problems that have arisen because of the condition of the principal's records, any facts that might have a bearing on management's judgment or integrity, and any actuarial matters that have required an inordinate amount of time in the past. Any such information should be given due weight by the proposed new or additional actuary before he decides whether he wishes, and can properly consent, to act.

When the principal has given his consent to such discussion, the other actuary should cooperate in making available relevant information, provided appropriate compensation is anticipated. Such information would include any pertinent data and documents, but need not include any items of a proprietary nature.

The original actuary must not, without the consent of the principal, disclose to the new or additional actuary any information which might involve the principal's confidential affairs.

Opinion d—ADVERTISING

INTRODUCTION

This Opinion supplements Guide 5 by presenting standards by which to distinguish advertising inconsistent with the intent of the Guide from advertising which serves the informational needs of the public and the legitimate publicity needs of actuaries and of organizations which employ actuaries. An actuary practicing in any field which is subject to rules prescribed by a regulatory body should also be aware of any rules promulgated by that body to govern advertising by professional practitioners whose service falls within its jurisdiction.

DEFINITION

"Advertising" as used in this Opinion encompasses all communications by whatever medium, including oral communications, which may directly or indirectly influence any person or organization to decide whether he has a need for actuarial services or to select a specific person or firm to perform actuarial services.

STATEMENT OF OPINION

It is the intent of this Opinion to discourage advertising which contains any statements or claims which are in any respect false, fraudulent, misleading, or deceptive, without discouraging advertising which serves the public by conveying information which is likely to be useful in deciding whether the services of any actuary are needed and in selecting an actuary to perform needed services. Doubtful cases should be resolved in the spirit of that intent and Guide 5(b).

Pursuant to this general Opinion, the Committee expresses the following specific opinions.

1. An actuary would be acting in conflict with the Guides to Professional Conduct if advertising used by him, or on his behalf with his knowledge and consent, contains any statements or claims which are in any respect false, fraudulent, misleading, or deceptive. Examples of advertising that would be in conflict include, but are not limited to, the following:

   a) Advertising that falsely states or suggests that the services offered by another actuary are inferior to, or more expensive than, comparable services offered by the advertiser;

   b) Advertising that contains statements of subjective opinion unless clearly identifiable as such;

   c) Advertising that creates an expectation of favorable results that an actuary with relevant experience would know to be unjustified;

   d) Advertising that implies the ability to bring improper influence to bear on any legislative, judicial, or regulatory body;

   e) Advertising that offers a program, plan or other service that requires continued or future supervision by an actuary for its proper application but which fails to state the need for such continued or future supervision; or

   f) Advertising that describes or suggests the basis of charges without disclosing any additional factors which may result in greater charges or other cost to the client, including advertising of actuarial services at reduced rates without disclosing that the cost of these services is included in whole or in part in the cost of other services or products provided to the client either by the actuary or by another person or organization with whom the actuary has any direct or indirect financial affiliation.

2. Advertising which relates to professional actuarial services, which emanates from a client, employer or other affiliate of the actuary and which may result in personal advantage to the actuary can be presumed to have been used on his behalf with his knowledge and consent, and the actuary shares the responsibility for such advertising.

3. It would not be in conflict with the Guides to Professional Conduct to use advertising, not otherwise inconsistent with the foregoing standards, which:

a) Seeks to improve public understanding of actuarial services and of the availability of actuaries to perform such services;

b) Describes the nature of services offered and lists the names and professional qualifications (including brief biographical data when appropriate) of actuaries providing such services;

c) Contains a statement of policy or position related to the practice of actuarial science or addressed to a subject of public interest;

d) Announces the promotion of actuaries, or changes in personnel or affiliation, or change of address; or

e) Announces the availability for sale of books, programs, or systems written or produced by the actuary or his firm.

OPINION A-2: USE OF TITLES AND DESIGNATIONS
(Adopted 1970)

Guide 7 and Section 1 of Article I of the Bylaws are concerned primarily with the use of titles by an actuary and, in particular, with designations related to the Academy. The purpose of the Guide is to clarify the proper use of a designation. For this Opinion, the term title means any title conferred by an employer and need not denote officer standing, and the term designation means a specific reference to any relationship of an actuary to the Academy.

As an example of the use of titles, consider an employee who has the title of "Assistant Actuary" conferred by his employer. He may use this title and also the designation "M.A.A.A." if a member. If he wishes to use both, he would sign as follows:

James H. Jones, M.A.A.A.
Assistant Actuary

or

James H. Jones, Member of the American Academy of Actuaries
Assistant Actuary

If an employee has been given no title, he merely signs his name with or without the appropriate designation. This Guide applies fully, whether or not the employee has a title.

An actuary might act other than as an employee or other than on behalf of a client in giving an actuarial opinion before a public committee or other body for which he is not specifically compensated by anyone. In such activity he should adhere to this Guide as to the use of designations.

A Director may use his designation "Director, American Academy of Actuaries" only when dealing with Academy business or when authorized to speak for the Academy. The same is true of all appointed or elected positions in the Academy.

The Committee also believes that an actuary may not include on a letterhead any references to offices and committee memberships he holds in the Academy, except when used for Academy business. Regardless of his offices either elected or appointed, he may never speak for the Academy or for one of its committees unless authorized to do so by the Board of Directors.

In the opinion of the Committee, it would not be a violation of Guide 7 to refer to offices held in the Academy in biographical material of any type (including material in connection with a book or article written by an actuary), or in connection with other generally published material. It would not be a violation to refer to offices held in the Academy when giving testimony in a court of law or before a public body, provided it is made clear that the actuary does not speak for the Academy or one of its committees, unless specifically authorized to do so.

It would not be a violation to use such biographical material when appropriate in connection with a promotion, change in employment or on any other similat occasion. The ultimate test is whether the reader could be led to conclude that the actuary is representing himself as a spokesman of the Academy or of one of its component parts.

OPINION A-3: TRANSMITTAL OF ACTUARIAL REPORTS (Adopted 1970)

DEFINITIONS

An actuarial report is essentially a statement of actuarial findings, conclusions or recommendations resulting from the actuary's experience and judgment, applied within the framework of a particular set of facts and assumptions. In this Opinion, the term is intended to include any communication, certificate or report based, in whole or in part, on knowledge which is peculiar to an actuary or where the reader of any such communication, certificate or report may be influenced by the fact that the writer is an actuary.

The term client is intended to include any person or organization for whom an actuarial report is prepared, and whose actions or decisions may reasonably be expected to be influenced by such a report.

OBJECTIVE

Any manner of transmittal of an actuarial report, prepared by an actuary, which involves the risk that the underlying facts and assumptions, and the limitations resulting from their use, are not fully communicated to the client involves a corresponding risk that the conclusions or recommendations may be misinterpreted or misapplied. It is important, therefore, that this risk be minimized or eliminated.

PERTINENT GUIDES

Guides 2(c) and 4(a) are both pertinent to the question of proper transmittal of actuarial reports. These Guides have, in the Committee's opinion, been designed to assure the maximum practical safeguards against the misinterpretation or misuse of actuarial findings or recommendations. Thus, Guide 4(a) provides for the inclusion in an actuarial report of such underlying data as are essential to the findings or conclusions reported. The key test is whether another actuary, unfamiliar with the situation, would find the information sufficient to appraise the conclusions.

Guide 2(c) is designed primarily to assure that the information called for in Guide 4(a) will, in fact, be communicated to the client, and that the client will be in a position to verify his understanding of the report directly with the actuary who prepared it, or with another actuary equally well qualified to explain the report. It also serves to give assurance to the actuary that his conclusions and recommendations are properly interpreted and applied.

ACTUARY ACTING FOR AN INSURANCE COMPANY

When an actuary advises an insurance company on premiums, dividends, reserves and related matters, the client is the company, its policy-making executives and in some situations its board of directors and its auditors, whether or not he is an employee of the insurance company. Thus, in such circumstances, the member should satisfy himself that the persons who may be expected to utilize his report are fully cognizant of the significance of his findings.

ACTUARY ACTING FOR A POLICYHOLDER OF AN INSURANCE COMPANY

When an actuary prepares a report for a policyholder (or a prospective policyholder), which contains actuarial costs or forecasts that are in the nature of recommendations rather than guarantees fully supported by the insurance company, Guides 2(c) and 4(a) are fully applicable, since in this situation the policyholder is the client. For example, in offering recommendations as to contributions under a deposit administration pension contract, the actuary responsible, whether an employee of the insurance company or an outside consultant, should make certain that he is personally identified as the source of the recommendation, that his report is not abridged or edited en route to the client, and that his availability to answer any questions regarding the report is known. This should apply whether or not there is an explicit recommendation of contributions, and whether or not the report states clearly the extent to which company guarantees are involved.

ACTUARY IN RELATION TO NON-INSURED PENSION PLANS

When an actuary prepares a report including cost or contribution figures in relation to a non-insured pension plan, Guides 2(c) and 4(a) apply. Thus, if the report is delivered by a non-actuarial associate of the actuary, or through a bank or trust company, the Committee believes that the actuary should recognize the risk of misinterpretation or misuse, and he should guard against it by application of the procedures indicated by Guide 2(c). This can be done where the actuary does not sign or deliver the report, by the concurrent use of a supplemental statement, signed by the actuary, covering the actuarial portions of the material included.

As a special case of the foregoing, it is the opinion of the Committee that an actuary should not become a party to any arrangement whereby a bank, investment advisor, insurance broker or other separate person or organization will use reports prepared by the actuary, unless the actuary is identified and it is clearly understood and agreed that the actuary's responsibility is to the employer whose plan or proposed plan is the subject of the report and that the provisions of Guide 2(c) will be strictly observed.

ACTUARY IN RELATION TO LEGISLATION AND REGULATIONS (Adopted 1975)

When an actuary in his professional capacity prepares or is directly involved in the preparation of a report which includes or relies on an actuarial analysis of the implications of a legislative or regulatory act or proposal, Guides 2(c) and 4(a) apply. Thus if the report is not prepared solely by the actuary or is delivered by a non-actuary or by a committee composed partially of non-actuaries, or through an organization, the actuary should recognize the risk of misinterpretation or misuse of the actuarial aspects of the report. The actuary should consider the desirability of preparing a supplemental statement covering the actuarial portion of the material included. The objective of Guide 2(c) will be more fully satisfied if the main body of the report refers to any such supplemental statement, identifies the actuary, and indicates his availability to answer questions. In any case, where figures or other actuarial information are incorporated in a document or other presentation for which some person or some entity other than an actuary takes responsibility, the actuary should take all reasonable steps to insure (a) that the material is presented fairly and, in particular, that the implications of the actuarial analysis are clearly stated and (b) that if only a part of the information is incorporated, it is not presented in a way likely to give a misleading impression.

RESPONSIBILITY FOR AN ACTUARIAL REPORT TO A CLIENT

An actuary who is responsible for an actuarial report, a statement of actuarial opinion, or any other actuarial document must sign the document with his own name. The name of an organization with which an actuary is affiliated may be incorporated in the signature, but the respective responsibilities of the actuary and of the organization are not affected by the form of the signature.

OPINION A-4: ACTUARIAL PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICES IN CONNECTION WITH PENSION PLANS (Adopted 1970; Opinion 4 added 1974)

INTRODUCTION

This Opinion is intended to interpret and amplify the application of Section 4 of the Guides to Professional Conduct to actuarial valuations of employee retirement plans. As such, the Opinion is directed to an actuary who prepares actuarial reports providing information directed towards employers, government bodies, employee groups, unions or other members of the public in connection with the design, revision, valuation or funding of employee retirement plans.

The Committee recognizes that it would be inappropriate to prescribe inflexible guides for the performance of the actuary's work in connection with pension plan calculations. They also recognize that the selection of assumptions and cost methods involves professional judgment based on individual circumstances applicable to a particular plan, including the purpose or purposes which the valuation is intended to serve, the nature of the employee group, the degree of funding already accomplished and the prospect of permanence of the sponsoring organization or of the plan. The promulgation of uniform procedures or practices which fail to take into account such variables would, in the opinion of the Committee, be unprofessional.

On the other hand, the Committee believes that the effectiveness of the actuary would be enhanced by the adoption of a statement of principles relating to appropriate application of actuarial science to pension problems and to adequate disclosure of pertinent and material facts bearing on his work. It is believed that such a statement of the basic responsibilities of the actuary will tend to minimize possibilities of misunderstanding or misinterpretation by those relying on his work.

THE APPLICABLE GUIDES

The following material appearing in the Guides to Professional Conduct is especially applicable to the work of the actuary on pension matters:

"4. Calculations and Recommendations.

a) The actuary will customarily include in any report or certificate quoting actuarial costs, reserves, or liabilities a statement or reference describing or clearly identifying the data and the actuarial methods and assumptions employed.

b) The actuary will exercise his best judgment to ensure that any calculations or recommendations made by him or under his direction are based on sufficient and reliable data, that any assumptions made are adequate and appropriate, and that the methods employed are consistent with the sound principles established by precedents or common usage within the profession.

c) If, nevertheless, a client or employer requests the actuary to prepare a study which in his opinion deviates from this practice, any resulting report, recommendation, or certificate submitted by him will include an appropriate and explicit qualification of his findings."

CLARIFYING STATEMENT OF WORKING GUIDE

A requirement common to all actuarial valuations is that assumptions and methods be selected and applied with integrity, good judgment and perspective in relation to the particular problem.

Diverse purposes which an actuarial valuation may be designed to serve may call for approaches which differ from those appropriate to other situations. For example, the methods and assumptions appropriate to solvency tests associated with possible plan terminations, plan mergers or partial plan spinoffs, may be quite different from those appropriate to the determination of long-range cost levels of continuing plans. In the opinion of the Committee, it is reasonable for the actuary to give regard to the practical effect of his report in terms of its purpose.

In addition to considerations of fund solvency or the development of benefit security for participants, the actuary will probably take into account the financial needs and planning of the plan sponsor, as well as factors which may relate to requirements or suggestions made by accountants, governmental agencies and bargaining or other agreements.

Other special purposes of reports might relate to bargaining situations, determination of tax-deductible costs or exploration of the effect on future costs of variations in experience or the introduction of ancillary benefits such as liberalized vesting, survivors' benefits, etc.

1. "Actuarial soundness" is neither an absolute nor a unique concept, but must be considered in relation to the problem at hand and the accuracy with which future experience can be predicted. Therefore, the Committee believes that general opinions as to "actuarial soundness" should be avoided, wherever possible, and that an opinion as to the adequacy of a given financing arrangement with respect to specifically defined objectives, assumptions or requirements should be substituted, where appropriate, or otherwise be appended.

2. The actuary's responsibilities in the pension field involve, to a high degree, considerations affecting the public interest. Accordingly, the Committee believes that he should give consideration to the following:

   a) Careful interpretation of his client's objectives in terms of plan design, benefit security, and financing.

   b) Explanation of available alternatives and their effect on such objectives.

   c) Translation of client objectives into the type or types of valuation to be performed (i.e., special purpose valuations).

   d) Selection of appropriate assumptions and cost methods.

   e) Periodic analyses of experience in relation to assumptions.

   f) Analysis of trends in benefits, cost factors, social and economic factors affecting pensions, investment policies, employee security and the like.

   g) Adequate and clear disclosure of pertinent facts and findings in actuarial reports.

3. In the furnishing of reliable information the actuary is typically in a position of rendering advice based on the interaction of many assumptions, some of which are not susceptible of accurate statistical prediction. Therefore, the actuary has a responsibility to avoid misunderstanding by means of adequate disclosures. Accordingly, in the opinion of the Committee, the actuary's report, in addition to including the name of the actuary directing the report and his professional affiliation, should consider the following elements and give sufficient detail, where pertinent, to permit an objective appraisal of the valuation by another qualified actuary:

   a) The name of the person or firm retaining the actuary for the report, and the purpose which the report is intended to serve.

b) An outline or reference to an accessible outline of the plan of benefits being valued.

c) The effective date of the valuation, the date as of which the data were compiled, sources of data and any assumptions made with respect to unavailable census information.

d) A summary of the statistics pertaining to the group, broken down according to significant categories such as retired, active and terminated-vested, together with the book and market values of assets and the asset value used in the valuation.

e) A summary of the basic valuation results with a suitable statement relative to an appropriate level of pension cost and an appropriate range in contributions.

f) A statement of the actuarial assumptions and methods, including, where appropriate, an appraisal of their suitability for the purposes at hand and reference to factors which have not been considered. Changes in actuarial assumptions from those used in previous reports should be stated and their effect noted.

This statement should not be limited to factors explicitly assumed but should include a reference to the handling, or absence of consideration, of such other factors as the actuary in his judgment deems to have pertinence in an evaluation of future costs or cost incidence in terms of the purpose to be served by his report. Such factors, for example, may include inflation, probable margins, effect of plant shutdown, etc.

4. It is the opinion of the Committee that Guides 4(a), (b), and (c), as amplified by this Opinion A-4, require that the actuary take into consideration the published Recommendations of the Academy's Committee on Pension Actuarial Principles and Practices. An actuary who uses principles or practices which deviate materially from such Recommendations must be prepared to support his particular use of such principles or practices and should include in his report appropriate and explicit information with respect to such deviation. It is intended that such Recommendations, together with this Opinion A-4, constitute what shall be known as Generally Accepted Actuarial Principles and Practices relating to pension plans to the extent that actuarial principles and practices have been promulgated by the Academy; and, if there has not been such promulgation, the actuary must be guided by the sound principles established by precedents or common usage within the profession.

The Committee recognizes that an actuary may wish to take into consideration an exposure draft or other version of a proposed Recommendation of the Academy's Committee on Actuarial Principles and Practices in Connection with Pension Plans. An actuary who utilizes any such proposed Recommendation should recognize that it is subject to withdrawal or to revision prior to adoption. If an actuary makes reference to any such proposed Recommendation he should clearly identify it as such and as subject to withdrawal or revision.

OPINION A-5: QUALIFICATIONS TO GIVE ADVICE IN A SPECIFIC SITUATION

The purpose of this Opinion is to assist the actuary in interpreting paragraph 1(b) of the Guides to Professional Conduct. Because of the actuary's rigorous training in actuarial mathematics, insurance, and employee benefits, the public may believe that every actuary is well qualified to advise on all aspects of pensions and other employee benefits, life, sickness, and accident insurance (including individual, group, and social), on property and liability insurance, demography, investments, computers and on social and economic trends. This is a very extensive list, and most actuaries have had some training in almost every subject listed. A special responsibility rests on every actuary to undertake only those assignments which he is qualified to do; otherwise, the client will be ill-served and so will the profession.

An actuary will be deemed to be qualified to give advice in his capacity as an actuary if his general experience involving the application of his actuarial studies and training equips him to understand the pertinent aspects of the particular problem or situation concerning which his advice is sought, and to produce (with such professional consultation as may be necessary) solutions, opinions, or recommendations whose likely consequences he should be able to ascertain. Successful repetition of work of a similar nature over a period of years naturally enhances the actuary's qualifications to deal with work of such kind.

The actuary, bearing in mind the responsibility to his client, his profession, and the public, will have to judge whether or not his training and experience qualify him to give advice on a particular assignment. He must also be prepared to accept the opinion of his peers on the validity of that judgment.

There may be some situations where, because of special circumstances, an actuary is invited to give advice in a field where he has had inadequate training or experience. The actuary should accept an assignment for which his qualifications are so limited only after he has disclosed the limitations to his client, and should undertake in the course of the assignment research and professional consultation sufficient to overcome these limitations.

OPINION A-6: ACTUARIAL PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICES IN CONNECTION WITH FINANCIAL REPORTING OF LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN THE UNITED STATES
(Adopted 1973)

INTRODUCTION

This Opinion is intended to interpret and amplify the application of Sections 1, 2, 3, and 4 of the Guides to Professional Conduct, and their relation to the financial reporting of life insurance companies, including particularly their relation to the audit guide entitled "Audits of Stock Life Insurance Companies" published by the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants. It applies to any actuary who acts for a life insurance company in the preparation of a financial statement or report, who contributes elements for inclusion in any such financial statement or report, or who audits or reviews elements of any such financial statement or report, when such statement or report is to be presented as having been prepared in accordance with "Generally Accepted Accounting Principles" as that term is understood in the United States, and is intended for stockholders, policyowners, taxing authorities, regulatory authorities, or the general public, and is designed to show operating results, solvency, or other aspects of financial condition.

The Committee recognizes that it would be inappropriate to prescribe inflexible guides for the performance of the actuary's work in connection with the financial reporting of life insurance companies. The Committee also recognizes that the selection of assumptions and methods involves professional judgment based on the circumstances applicable to a particular situation, including the purpose or purposes which the actuary's work is intended to serve. The promulgation of uniform procedures or practices which fail to take into account such circumstances and variables would, in the opinion of the Committee, be unprofessional.

On the other hand, the Committee believes that there would be merit in adopting a statement of principles relating to the appropriate application of actuarial science to the financial reporting of life insurance companies and to adequate disclosure of pertinent and material facts. It is believed that the making and the observing of such a statement of the basic responsibilities of the actuary will tend to minimize the possibility of misunderstanding or misinterpretation by those relying on his work and the likelihood of need for disciplinary action under Article VIII of the Academy's Bylaws.

CLARIFYING STATEMENT

A requirement common to all actuarial procedures is that assumptions and methods be selected and applied with integrity, informed judgment, and perspective in relation to the purpose for which the results are intended.

Assumptions and methods may appropriately be different in calculations related to the same period or moment in time but intended for different purposes; for example, the statutory valuation of insurance reserves for use in financial reports to state regulatory authorities or the valuation of insurance reserves for use in federal income tax returns may require different assumptions and methods from those used for reserve valuations and related calculations in connection with financial statements which are prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.

Determinations of various elements of a given related set of financial statements must be based upon assumptions and methods which are consistent among themselves, with due regard for the purpose of the statements and for the methods to be employed in the calculations.

1. Guide 1(b) and Opinion A-5 remind the actuary that he will give actuarial advice only when he is qualified to do so. It is the opinion of the Committee that an actuary should undertake to prepare or verify reserves or other actuarial elements of financial statements only if he is familiar with the purposes and uses of such statements and, in the case of financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, with the application of such principles to life insurance accounting.

2. Guide 2(a) relates to the relationship of the actuary to his client or employer. It is the opinion of the Committee that an actuary who is responsible for any part of financial statements which are subject to audit must make sure that the auditor is fully cognizant of his relationship with the company. If a formal actuarial opinion is made part of published financial statements, the context of such opinion should make clear the relationship between the actuary and the company.

3. Guide 2(b) provides that an actuary will have due regard for the confidential nature of his work. It is the opinion of the Committee that when the actuary is required to make disclosures to the company's independent auditor and to support the assumptions and methods which he has used in the preparation of financial statements, appropriate steps should be taken to preserve the confidential nature of any formal written report which contains any confidential material.

4. When an actuary's work relates to financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, it is the opinion of the Committee that Guide 2(c) requires as a minimum that an actuarial report should be furnished to the company and to the company's independent auditor, if any. The objective of Guide 2(c) will be more fully satisfied if the auditor's opinion identifies the actuary or if published financial statements include a formal actuarial opinion. Any such actuarial report or opinion should identify the actuary, his relationship with the company, and the scope of his activity in relation to the financial statements involved. In situations where a number of actuaries who are responsible to a principal actuary participate in work relating to any such financial statement, any actuarial report or opinion should include the signature of the principal actuary.

5. Guide 3 relates to situations "in which there is or may be a conflict of interest involving the actuary's service" and states that "the actuary will not perform such service if the conflict makes or is likely to make it difficult for him to act independently." The service an actuary performs in reviewing financial statements for the purpose of forming, expressing, and publishing an opinion which purports to be independent with regard to such financial statements is a type of service to which Guide 3 is intended to relate. It is the opinion of the Committee that Guide 3 does not inhibit the service an actuary performs for an insurance company in preparing or evaluating material for inclusion in financial statements of such company. If an actuary employed or engaged by the reporting company does express a professional opinion regarding any material in the financial statements of such company, Guide 3 requires that his relationship with the company be clearly described in the opinion.

6. Guide 4(a) states that "the actuary will customarily include in any report or certificate quoting actuarial costs, reserves, or liabilities a statement or reference describing or clearly identifying the data and the actuarial methods and assumptions employed." It is the opinion of the Committee that Guide 4(a) as applied to the actuary's work in connection with financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles requires that the actuary disclose to the auditor the actuarial assumptions and methods, including, where appropriate, an appraisal of their suitability for the purposes at hand and reference to factors which have not been considered. In many instances such disclosure may be supported by oral discussions between the auditor and the actuary. Approximations and approximate methods may be used, provided that the actuary has satisfied himself that the result does not differ materially from the result of using more precise methods.

7. It is the opinion of the Committee that Guide 4(b) requires that the actuary, in selecting actuarial assumptions and methods for use in any financial statement prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, take into consideration the published formal Recommendations of the Academy's Committee on Financial Reporting Principles. An actuary who makes use in any such financial statement of any assumption or method which conflicts with such Recommendations must be prepared to support his use of such assumption or method.

8. The Committee recognizes that an actuary may wish to take into consideration an exposure draft or other version of a proposed Recommendation of the Academy's Committee on Financial Reporting Principles. An actuary who utilizes any such proposed Recommendation should recognize that it is subject to withdrawal or to revision prior to adoption.

If an actuary makes reference to any such proposed Recommendation he should clearly identify it as such and as subject to withdrawal or revision.

9. It is the opinion of the Committee that Guide 4(c) should be interpreted as requiring that an actuary who, for any reason, uses in financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles any assumption or method which in his opinion deviates materially from the requirements of Guide 4(b) or of Guide 4(d) will include in any actuarial report or opinion prepared in accordance with Opinion 4 above an appropriate and explicit qualification with respect to such deviation.

STATEMENT RESPECTING THE STRUCTURE AND THE PROCEDURES OF THE COMMITTEES ON FINANCIAL REPORTING PRINCIPLES

1. Each of the Committees on Financial Reporting Principles is a standing committee of the Academy, reporting directly to the Board. The General Committee shall have an advisory and coordinating relationship with the Specialized Committees. For that purpose the members of the General Committee shall be kept informed, by means of minutes and other informative communications, of the activities of the Specialized Committees, shall be given copies of any proposed Recommendation or proposed Interpretation whenever such copies are sent to members of the Academy's Board of Directors, and shall be given copies of any other formal communication of a Specialized Committee. The consent of the General Committee shall not be required as a condition for any action by a Specialized Committee.

DEFINITIONS

2. A Recommendation should be taken into consideration by actuaries, and an actuary who makes use of an assumption or method which conflicts with a Recommendation should be prepared to justify its use.

3. An Interpretation relates to a specific Recommendation. An Interpretation does not have the force of a Recommendation and is intended to explain, clarify, or enlarge upon some aspect of the related Recommendation.

4. A communication other than a Recommendation or Interpretation may be used for such purposes as to offer advice, to convey or elicit information, or to express informally an opinion or position of the Sponsoring Committee.

5. Any Recommendation, Interpretation or other communication shall clearly identify the Sponsoring Committee.

PROCEDURE FOR ADOPTION OF A PROPOSED RECOMMENDATION

6. A Specialized Committee may issue Recommendations on subjects which fall within its jurisdiction, and the General Committee may issue Recommendations on subjects that do not fall entirely within the jurisdiction of one of the Specialized Committees. A Recommendation, having the force of a professional opinion of the Academy, may be published only in accordance with the following procedure, which is designed to assure that a proposed Recommendation reflects actuarial principles which are generally recognized and broadly accepted by members of the profession.

Step A. A copy of the proposed Recommendation shall be sent to each member of the Academy's Board of Directors, with an invitation to comment by a specified date. The Board's approval is not required, but if two or more of the members of the Board express, either by their vote at a duly convened meeting of the Board or by individual letters addressed to the chairman of the Sponsoring Committee, a desire that processing of the proposed Recommendation be deferred, the Sponsoring Committee will not proceed to Step B unless and until the Board has acted to remove any such barrier to further processing.

Step B. After such initial circulation to members of the Board, the proposed Recommendation shall be circulated by the Sponsoring Committee to the members of the Academy, with an invitation to comment by a specified date.

Step C. After the Sponsoring Committee has reviewed any comments and made any revision of the proposed Recommendation which it thinks appropriate to reflect such comments, a copy of the proposed Recommendation as so amended shall be sent to each member of the Board.

Step D. The proposed Recommendation may not be published until 30 days thereafter, and may not be published then if two or more of the members of the Board express, either by their vote at a duly convened meeting of the Board or by individual letters addressed to the chairman of the Sponsoring Committee, a desire that publication be further deferred. In any such case the publication of the proposed Recommendation, or of any modification thereof, will be deferred until the Board has acted to remove any such barrier to publication.

PROCEDURE FOR ADOPTION OF A PROPOSED INTERPRETATION

7. The release of an Interpretation which does not have the force of a Recommendation, need not be subject to the same procedural requirements as the publication of a Recommendation; but, because an Interpretation may have an influence on the application of the related Recommendation, a proposed Interpretation should not be released without prior exposure to the members of the Academy's Board of Directors. A copy of the proposed Interpretation shall be sent to each member of the Board. The proposed Interpretation may not be published until 30 days thereafter, and may not be published then if two or more of members of the Board express, either by their vote at a duly convened meeting of the Board or by individual letters addressed to the chairman of the Sponsoring Committee, a desire that publication be further deferred. In any such case the publication of the proposed Interpretation, or of any modification thereof, will be deferred until the Board has acted to remove any such barrier to publication.

COMMENT

8. The foregoing procedures permit members of the Board to exercise a veto power but do not provide for formal approval by the Board. There may be circumstances in which the Board may subsequently be expected to evaluate the substance of a Recommendation or an Interpretation, which can be done with better grace if formal approval was not given initially.

RECOMMENDATION 1: ACTUARIAL METHODS AND ASSUMPTIONS FOR USE IN FINANCIAL STATEMENTS OF STOCK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES PREPARED IN ACCORDANCE WITH GENERALLY ACCEPTED ACCOUNTING PRINCIPLES

(Published July 19, 1973 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Recommendation relates to the actuarial methods and assumptions for all elements affecting costs (i.e., all benefits and all expenses, excluding any specific loading for profit) with respect to reserves for non-participating policies or contracts when used by a stock life insurance company in connection with financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles.
2. Such actuarial assumptions (a) should be appropriate to the specific circumstances of the company, (b) should be based on experience or estimated experience which is reasonably applicable to the specific business in the light of all the characteristics of that business and the trends of experience which may reasonably be expected in the future, and (c) should be so selected that no portion of the actual gross premium would be available as a specific loading for profit unless the risks of adverse deviation are duly provided for in the valuation premium.
3. The following should be among the elements considered by the actuary in choosing such actuarial assumptions:
   a) The character and magnitude of the company's business, the types of business which it writes, the age of the company, and its rate of growth.
   b) Prior experience of the company to the extent that the actuary considers it a valid basis for current assumptions, with due regard for the probable consequences of any significant changes in method of operation or plans for the future.
   c) Trends in experience results, economic and investment conditions, governmental or other external influences, and medical and social developments affecting costs and financial requirements.

4. For non-participating ordinary and industrial life insurance the range of such acuarial assumptions should be constrained by the relationship, for an entire line of business or a major block of business, of actual gross premiums to three theoretical valuation premiums:

   Type 1: A Type 1 valuation premium is a premium based on assumptions selected as of the acquisition date which include provisions, selected without regard to the level of the gross premium, for the risks of adverse deviations from most likely assumptions.

   Type 2: A Type 2 valuation premium is a premium based on most likely assumptions (i.e., without provision for the risks of adverse deviations) selected as of the acquisition date.

   Type 3: A Type 3 valuation premium is a premium based on assumptions selected as of the acquisition date which substantially reproduce the actual gross premium.

5. The assumptions for Type 1 valuation premiums and for Type 3 valuation premiums should be so chosen that a reasonable balance is maintained with respect to the provisions for each risk of adverse deviation.

6. If the actual gross premiums equal or exceed the Type 1 valuation premiums, the reserve should be the excess of the present value of future costs over the present value of future Type 1 valuation premiums, valued on Type 1 assumptions.

7. If the actual gross premiums are less than the Type 1 valuation premiums but equal to or greater than the Type 2 valuation premiums, the reserve should be the excess of the present value of future costs over the present value of future Type 3 valuation premiums, valued on Type 3 assumptions.

8. If the actual gross premiums are less than the Type 2 valuation premiums, the reserve should be the excess of the present value of future costs over the present value of future actual gross premiums, valued on Type 2 assumptions.

9. Assumptions selected as of the acquisition date should be used in computing the reserves for use in all subsequent financial statements, prepared by the company in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles unless, at a subsequent valuation date, reserve strengthening is required to recognize future losses. Reserve strengthening is required on a valuation date whenever:

   a) The then present value of future benefits and expenses exceeds

   b) the sum of

      (i) the then present value of future gross premiums and

      (ii) the current reserve on the existing valuation basis

for an entire line of business or a major block of business, using most likely assumptions selected as of the valuation date. Reserves on the strengthened basis are the excess of the present value of future costs over the present value of future gross premiums, valued on current most likely assumptions.* Reserves on subsequent dates should continue to be valued on those assumptions, unless at a later date further strengthening is required to recognize future losses. It should be noted that, if most likely assumptions are used in the valuation process, there will be a need for frequent review to determine whether additional reserve strengthening becomes necessary as a result of deterioration in the expected experience.

10. When reserves are calculated according to item 8 or strengthened according to item 9, and when the negative element of the total reserve arising from acquisition expenses is separated and shown as an asset (often labeled "unamortized acquisition expense"), the effect of the deficiency should be recognized first by reducing the "unamortized acquisition expense."
11. The term "acquisition date" as used in this Recommendation means the issue date, except that for statements of an acquiring company the term shall mean the date of purchase where a life insurance company has been acquired by purchase or where policies originally issued by another insurer have been acquired by purchase. (In the case of a pooling of interests, the assumptions selected at the issue date should continue to be used unless and until strengthened reserves are required.)
12. Appropriately analogous constraints should apply to the range of such actuarial assumptions used for lines of non-participating insurance other than ordinary and industrial life insurance.
13. In the interest of practicality and the avoidance of unnecessarily burdensome procedures, the actuary should feel free to adopt approximate procedures and to make reasonable groupings of policies as long as he is satisfied that the results of using such procedures and groupings do not differ materially from the results of applying the Recommendation directly.

INTERPRETATION 1-A: UNDERLYING THEORY

(Published July, 1973 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. Important differences between statutory accounting and GAAP accounting for stock life insurance companies lie in the scope of the reserve system. The reserve system is a key element in matching related revenue

* Generally accepted accounting principles, as determined by the AICPA Committee on Insurance Accounting and Auditing, require that the most likely assumptions used in calculating reserves on the strengthened basis contain some degree of conservatism. In compliance with this accounting requirement, it is recommended that any questions or close decision involved in selecting such assumptions be consistently resolved in the direction which would result in deferring the recognition of profit.

and costs in each of the many accounting periods through which a group of policies will be in force. The reserve system used in statutory accounting matches the cost of policy benefits with the net premiums and investment income related to such benefits, and the underlying actuarial assumptions are subject to conservative legal constraints. Modified reserve methods represent a significant but imprecise and incomplete means of matching expenses and related revenue.

2. A key purpose of GAAP accounting is the matching of cost and revenue through the use of a reserve system which encompasses all elements of cost (i.e., expenses as well as benefits, but excluding any specific loading for profit) and which presumes the use of actuarial assumptions which in the words of the Audit Guide are "characterized by conservatism which is reasonable and realistic."

3. Accounting theory takes into consideration, among other concerns, the effect of accounting practice on the emergence of profits. Insurance operating profit (or loss, if negative) will, in general, arise from three sources, the three components being combined algebraically:

   a) The effect of expected experience (i.e., most likely assumptions) more (or less) favorable than valuation assumptions; plus

   b) The effect of actual experience more (or less) favorable than expected experience; plus

   c) A specific loading for profit (which may be zero).

4. The choice of actuarial assumptions affects the distribution of profit among those sources. The general theory underlying the disciplining of actuarial assumptions for GAAP reserves has been called, by the Joint Actuarial Committee on Financial Reporting, "the intermediate form of release from risk reserving method."* That form of the release from risk reserving method has the effect of applying the following specific disciplines to the actuarial assumptions and to the relationship between the actual gross premium and the valuation premium based on those assumptions:

   a) Each actuarial assumption underlying GAAP reserves should be chosen with due regard to providing for the risk of adverse deviation, over and above the most likely assumption,

   b) There should be a reasonable balance among the provisions for risk of adverse deviation, both by type of assumption and by policy year,

* See Richard G. Horn, "Life Insurance Earnings and the Release from Risk Policy Reserve System," Transactions of the Society of Actuaries, XXIII (1971), 391-418. The theory is also discussed in the Response of the Joint Actuarial Committee on Financial Reporting Principles to the August, 1972, exposure draft of "Audits of Stock Life Insurance Companies," September 29, 1972.

c) Any specific loading for profit in the actual gross premium is limited to the excess, if any, of the gross premium over the valuation premium based on actuarial assumptions which include appropriate provisions for the risks of adverse deviation, and

d) Measures to avoid deferring the recognition of loss should be taken if the actual gross premiums are inadequate.

5. With those disciplines, profits from the first source should be positive and will emerge substantially in proportion to release from risk; profit or loss from the second source will emerge in each accounting period to the extent that actual experience is more favorable or less favorable than expected experience; and any profit from the third source will emerge substantially in proportion to the receipt of premiums.

6. The relationships defined in paragraph 4 of Recommendation 1 may be applied for an entire line of business or at the discretion of the actuary, for major blocks within a line. The actuary would not be expected to compute Type 2 and Type 3 premiums if actual gross premiums equal or exceed Type 1 premiums, nor would he be expected to compute Type 3 premiums if actual gross premiums are less than Type 2 premiums.

7. The determination of actual gross premiums is the responsibility and prerogative of the company. If the gross premiums so established make relatively small provision for the risks of adverse deviation, the GAAP reserves will be based on actuarial assumptions which produce a valuation premium substantially equal to the actual gross premium, with no specific loading for profit.

8. A loading for profit can be recognized in GAAP accounting only to the extent that the gross premium is larger than the valuation premium based on assumptions which make reasonable provisions for the risks of adverse deviation. If it is desired that the gross premium contain a specific loading for profit, it will be the responsibility of the actuary to determine the amount of provision for the risk of adverse deviation associated with each assumption which, in the aggregate effect on the valuation premium, is reasonable.

9. If the actual gross premium is unusually low, it will be the responsibility of the actuary to test whether measures should be taken to avoid deferring the recognition of loss.

INTERPRETATION 1B: CONSERVATISM

(Revised January, 1976 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. The AICPA Audit Guide states that "conservatism in valuing assets and liabilities and in accounting for revenues and costs is necessary because of the uncertainties inherent in the use of actuarial assumptions and estimates for contracts guaranteeing performance over long periods of time and the risk of unfavorable variations (adverse deviations) from such assumptions and estimates" (pages 63-64). The Audit Guide goes on to say, "However, as contemplated by generally accepted accounting principles, such conservatism must be reasonable and realistic."

2. The theory which underlies Recommendation #1 provides a way by which quantitative concepts can be used in discussions of the indefinite concept "conservatism". It does so by recognizing the principle that no portion of the actual gross premium should be available as a specific loading for profit unless the risks of adverse deviation have been duly provided for in the valuation premium.

3. With respect to each assumption, provisions for adverse deviation should be made in such a way as to not decrease the valuation premium. The provisions for adverse deviation should be distributed among the assumptions and among policy years by considering the degree of uncertainty associated with the assumption and the financial effect on the company of deviation from the valuation assumptions. For all durations, the aggregate reserve should equal or exceed the amount the aggregate reserve would equal if no provision were made for adverse deviation. In general, the conditions described in this paragraph relating to the level of the valuation premium and the level of the aggregate reserve should be satisfied for all issues of a calendar year for a line of business. It is not necessary that the relationships hold for each plan and each age at issue. The valuation premium condition is to be satisfied by the provision for adverse deviation made in each actuarial assumption. The aggregate reserve condition is for the provision for adverse deviation in all assumptions combined and is to be satisfied by the difference between the amount carried on the balance sheet as reserve liability and the amount carried as a deferred charge on account of unamortized acquisition expense, not on these two reserve components separately (see paragraph (2), Interpretation 1-c).

4. It would not be reasonable to use current market yields, at a time when current yield rates are high in historical perspective, as the long term interest assumption for Type One premiums. Whatever interest assumption may be justifiable for early policy years, a conservative interest assumption for distant policy years should take into account the historical perspective.

5. The choice of actuarial assumptions for old blocks of business involves special considerations when a company is preparing its first financial reports in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. The usual procedure for existing business would be to base actuarial assumptions on those underlying the actual gross premiums, subject to appropriate testing of the adequacy of the gross premiums in the light of current most likely assumptions. In principle, the degree of conservatism adopted for old blocks of business, with respect to assumptions considered appropriate for the time that such business was issued, should be consistent with the degree of conservatism considered appropriate for new business at the time of transition. The use of a greater degree of conservatism in choosing assumptions for the valuation of business existing at the time of transition would normally increase the stated earnings in the years after the transition and would be inappropriate.

INTERPRETATION 1-C: EXPENSES

(Revised October, 1979 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. Generally Accepted Accounting Principles require that the cost of insurance benefits and the expenses associated with acquiring and maintaining insurance business be recognized in relation to premium revenue. For long-term policies of individual life insurance and individual health insurance the reserve system is the actuarial technique for achieving such matching of insurance costs to revenue.
2. The Audit Guide's requirement that the negative reserve component reflecting prepaid and unamortized acquisition expenses be shown separately as a deferred charge is based on accounting principles, not on actuarial principles. The choice of methods for determining the amount of such deferred charge is not necessarily governed by actuarial principles, but actuarial techniques may be employed for such determination and must be employed to test recoverability of the amount of unamortized acquisition expense. To be consistent with actuarial principles, the difference between the amount carried on the balance sheet as reserve liability and the amount carried as deferred charge on account of unamortized acquisition expense must be substantially equal to the present value of future costs less the present value of future valuation premiums, based on actuarial assumptions determined in accordance with Recommendation 1.
3. Sound actuarial practice takes account of all elements of future cost, including all maintenance expenses, when testing the adequacy of premiums and reserves to carry policies to completion, and it is good actuarial practice to include actuarial assumptions for level maintenance expenses in reserve computations. For those policies for which level premiums are payable throughout the term of the policy, it is true, as the Audit Guide suggests, that the actuarial assumption for level maintenance expenses does not affect the reserve. The reserve for other types of policies may be affected, however, and any maintenance expense assumption which is not level will always affect the reserve. Similarly, unlevel renewal commissions will affect either the reserve or the amount of unamortized acquisition expenses.
4. Although actuarial principles might recognize other alternatives, the Audit Guide requires that the amount of provision for deferred acquisition expenses taken into the reserve system for any accounting period not differ materially from the actual recoverable deferrable acquisition expenses of that period. Thus, if actual deferrable acquisition expenses are materially greater than the provision made in the valuation premium for such expenses, the actuary should increase the provision for acquisition expense in the valuation premium, provided that the resulting valuation premium does not exceed the gross premium. Similarly, if actual deferrable acquisition expenses are materially less than the provision made in the valuation premium for such expenses, the actuary should eliminate the difference from the amount of acquisition expenses deferred. Adjustments because of differences between actual and assumed acquisition expenses should be reflected in the valuation premiums used when making the recoverability test specified in paragraphs 4 through 8 of Recommendation 1.

5. The amount of certain items of deferrable acquisition expense cannot be known in time to be used in the financial statements of the accounting period in which policies are issued, and must be estimated. Such items may include, for example, first-year commissions and expenses related to first-year premiums which are paid on other than an annual basis.

6. The Audit Guide requires the auditor, when reviewing the actual amount of acquisition charges which may be deferred, to recognize for that purpose "only those acquisition expenses which both vary with, and are primarily related to, the production of new business." When considering any indirect expense, the Guide advises the auditor that judgment will be required, "with overriding considerations being those of reasonable conservatism, consistency, and recoverability." The actuary should be prepared to demonstrate the relationship between any item of actual acquisition expense and the provision in the valuation premium for acquisition expense, and the effect of that relationship on recoverability. Any first-year expense not deferred will be charged against income in the accounting period in which it is incurred and thus not matched against future premium revenues. In order that the valuation premium include provision for all future costs, it is important that any item charged as a first-year expense not include any amount which properly should be attributed to any subsequent policy year.

7. Judgment must be exercised as to the applicability of current expense rates to future years. The expense factors should take into account the actual experience of the company to the extent unit cost information is available and applicable. They should also reflect expected long term trends and not give undue weight to recent experience. An upward trend in unit expenses should be considered in determining expense assumptions. A declining trend in unit expenses should not be projected unless there are sound reasons to believe that such trend will continue. The actuary should consider the expected rate of future new business as well as the impact of inflation on future unit expense rates. The underlying assumption for future inflation should be consistent with that considered in selecting interest rate assumptions.

INTERPRETATION 1-D: PURCHASE ACCOUNTING

(Published September, 1977 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

This interpretation relates to actuarial considerations involved in computing policy reserves for individual life insurance policies acquired in a transaction which is to be accounted for under the "Purchase Accounting" rules described in Accounting Principles Board Opinion No. 16.

1. It is stated in Recommendation 1 that reserves computed under "Purchase Accounting" situations should be based on assumptions which are chosen as of the date of purchase. Several methods of computing reserves in these situations have been developed/1/. The following two methods are recognized to have substantial support within the profession as producing results consistent with the application of Recommendation 1 to other business.

   a) Defined Initial Reserve Method. The initial reserve is taken as a predetermined amount. Using this initial reserve and actuarial assumptions appropriate to the business which include provisions for adverse deviations, valuation premiums are computed which may be used in subsequent valuations. If the resulting valuation premiums exceed the gross premiums for a line of business or a major block of business, the provisions for adverse deviation may be reduced to the extent necessary to avoid this deficiency, except that in no event may the valuation assumptions be less conservative than most likely assumptions.

   If valuation premiums exceed gross premiums under most likely assumptions, the gross premiums should be used as valuation premiums and reserves should be computed using most likely assumptions. The excess of the reserves over the predetermined amount may be treated as goodwill.

   If the resulting valuation premiums are negative, reserves should be taken as the present value of future benefits and expenses, and the excess of the predetermined amount over the reserves may be treated as negative goodwill. Such a situation could occur if a large portion of the business is paid up.

   Although, under the Defined Initial Reserve Method, the initial reserve is taken as a predetermined amount, the total reserve must then be allocated to each plan, issue year and issue age cell.

   In arriving at the predetermined amount, it would be appropriate to use the amount determined by the purchaser in establishing the purchase price, so long as the elements of the purchase price were bargained for in good faith and the predetermined amount gave due consideration to appropriate provisions of APB Opinion No. 16 relating to the allocation of the purchase price and the subsequent accounting thereof. If the purchase price has been determined by a method which utilized book values for the assets of the purchased company, the Defined Initial Reserve Method is not appropriate for determining the reserves for the individual life business.

b) Defined Valuation Premium Method. Valuation premiums for the acquired business are taken as the gross premiums less a reasonable profit allowance for the risk assumed by the acquiring corporation. Reserves are then computed as the present value of future benefits and maintenance expenses less the present value of future valuation premiums, using assumptions appropriate to the business which include provision for adverse deviation.

In applying the Defined Valuation Premium Method a determination of a reasonable profit allowance must be made. The profit allowance and the provision for adverse deviation used in determining the reserves should be consistent with those which apply to current new business issued by the company which will be assuming the future risk on the acquired business. This may be either the acquiring company or the purchased company, depending on whether or not the purchased company is continued as a separate entity or merged with the purchaser.

2. Under both methods, assumptions for experience after the date of purchase are to be chosen as of the purchase date. The interest assumptions should be chosen with due consideration to the investment income which will be generated by the assets attributable to the business, which will have been revalued to market at the time of the purchase. Mortality, expense, and lapse assumptions should reflect current experience rather than the historical assumptions appropriate at the time the policies were originally issued by the purchased company. Assumptions for future maintenance expenses should be appropriate for the company which will be maintaining the business in the future, which may be either the acquiring company or the purchased company.

3. In applying either of the above methods, the actuary should consider the reasonableness of the results. The reasonableness of the Defined Initial Reserve Method may be judged by examining the relation of valuation premiums to gross premiums. The reasonableness of the Defined Valuation Premium Method may be judged by comparing the amount of goodwill to other items in the financial statement.

4. It is required for purposes of presentation of the financial statement to divide the reserve into an asset item and a liability item. One technique for accomplishing the division is to calculate valuation premiums, using the assumptions adopted in accordance with paragraph 2, which have a present value equal to the deferred acquisition cost carried by the purchased company at the date of purchase. This amount could then be added to both assets and liabilities so as to produce a deferred acquisition cost and to increase the benefit reserve. Another technique would be to determine the additional valuation premiums necessary to make the benefit reserve equal to the benefit reserves carried by the purchased company at the purchase date, and to add the present value of these additional premiums to both assets and liabilities, so as to produce a deferred acquisition cost asset. A third technique would be to split the valuation premium into an expense valuation premium and a benefit valuation premium in the same proportion as the valuation premium is split on new issues.

5. When, because of purchase accounting rules, cumulative deferred tax credits are eliminated from the balance sheet, reserves for the insurance then in force should be sufficient to provide for future Federal Income Taxes which are expected to be generated by such business.

6. If the cost of the purchased company exceeds the net assets (assets less liabilities) acquired, the excess should be amortized in accordance with the requirements of prevailing accounting rules. If the excess arises only in connection with the acquisition of existing individual life insurance business, the actuary may, for example, compute an amortization method which is proportionate to the GAAP profits expected to emerge from the business, based on the revised valuation assumptions. If the excess arises from other lines of insurance or from business to be generated in the future by the existing management and agency plan, the actuary may compute an amortization method which is proportionate to the projected GAAP profits from all sources.

7. If the net assets of the purchased company exceed the cost, it may be appropriate to reduce valuation net premiums for the existing insurance in force, so as to increase future profit margins. The reduction should first be applied to the portion of the premiums representing deferred acquisition costs.

INTERPRETATION 1-E: MORTALITY AND MORBIDITY

(Published October, 1979 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. When setting mortality assumptions, the company's own experience should be used as a guide to the expected mortality. If the company does not have experience studies, or if the experience is not statistically reliable, use may be made of intercompany statistics. It should be remembered that intercompany experience does not represent the experience of any one company but is a composite, with each company's results being higher or lower than the average. When setting mortality assumptions based on intercompany experience, the actuary should consider company experience to the extent that it is credible.

2. Other considerations in setting mortality assumptions include the nature of the market in which the product is sold, the type of insurance plan (including any renewability and convertibility features), the sex distribution, the underwriting standards of the company, the underwriting procedures used (medical, nonmedical, guaranteed issue, conversion of term insurance, exercise of guaranteed purchase options, etc.), and the underwriting mortality class. It may be appropriate to set separate mortality assumptions or establish separate additional reserves for the possible mortality classes which could be identified by the above items if material financial differences would result.

3. Additional reserves for substandard cases should reflect the nature of the hazard causing the rating. If the expected additional cost is constant, an approach using a level additional reserve may be satisfactory. However, if the additional cost varies with duration, reserves should be based on a table which reflects expected experience.

4. In selecting morbidity assumptions, in addition to the factors mentioned above the following should be considered:

   (a) Both the type of coverage and the specific contract provisions affect the choice of assumptions. Examples of contract provisions to be considered include the renewal provisions, any waiting period provisions, the definition of covered loss, and the benefit provisions.

   (b) Factors which could result in overinsurance, such as the level of public benefits and the likelihood of their expansion, should also be considered. If the replacement ratio of after-tax income could increase because of such factors, a more conservative valuation basis should be used.

   (c) The claim payment practices of the company should also be recognized in the morbidity assumptions selected. A liberal interpretation of policy benefits could require higher active-life reserves because of increased claim frequency or benefit payment levels. Conversely, the termination assumptions for the disabled-life reserves may be higher because of the liberal administration of new claims, resulting in lower required reserves per claim.

   (d) Existing legislation and judicial interpretation of contract provisions may occasionally require payment of benefits beyond those contemplated when the contract was drafted. Such increased obligations should be reflected in the reserves with respect to business written after the effect of such legislation or court decisions has been recognized.

   (e) The anticipated level of future inflation in health insurance costs and the ability of the company to secure timely rate increases should be considered in selecting morbidity assumptions.

5. The effect on the levels of valuation premiums and reserves must be examined when margins for adverse deviation in mortality and morbidity are selected. Interpretation 1-B (No. 3) provides that the margin for adverse deviation should not decrease the valuation premium and should develop aggregate reserves equal to or greater than the aggregate reserve without the margin for adverse deviation.

6. The margin for adverse deviation would not be expected to cover catastrophic risks or, in the case of annuities, significant medical breakthroughs.

INTERPRETATION 1-F: LAPSE

(Published October, 1979 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. The company's own experience should be used as a guide to the expected lapse rates to be experienced in the future. To the extent that a company's own lapse experience is not statistically reliable, intercompany experience may be used.

2. Factors which may be considered when establishing lapse rate assumptions include duration, issue age, plan of insurance, policy size, premium mode distribution, attained age, sex, renewability and convertibility, the market for the product, and the marketing technique employed.

3. Care should be taken when providing a margin for adverse deviation in lapse rates, since an increase in the lapse rates may reduce the reserve otherwise determined. Under these circumstances, it may be necessary to reduce the lapse rate below that expected in order to provide a margin for conservatism.

4. Lapse rates are often subject to economic cycles. It is not considered necessary to anticipate variations in lapse rates due to small temporary changes in economic conditions. Trends in economic conditions which are expected to be long term or severe enough to have a significant and continuing effect on lapse rates should be reflected in the lapse rate assumptions.

INTERPRETATION 1-G: INTEREST

(Published October, 1979 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. The interest rate assumption is the series of yield rates assumed on funds to be invested over the lifetime of the policies involved. The yield rate includes dividends, rental income, and interest, and is net of depreciation and other investment expenses. Accrual of discount and amortization of premium should be included in determining the yield rate. Factors to consider which may influence the expected yield rate assumption include the type of investments, anticipated cash flow and reinvestment patterns, recent or expected changes in company investment policy, inflation, the method which the company uses to distribute investment income for the type of business being valued, and government policy. The exposure to surrenders and to policy loans and the policy loan interest rate should also be considered in selecting the yield rate assumption.

2. The chance of adverse deviation with respect to funds which will be invested during the early years after issue is much less than with respect to funds which will be invested many years after issue. For this reason, the provision for adverse deviation should generally be greater for later durations than for earlier ones. It should be noted that, in certain situations, Interpretation 1-B (No. 3) will require that some assumed interest rates be increased to provide for adverse deviation.

INTERPRETATION 1-H: RELATION TO GROSS PREMIUM ASSUMPTIONS

(Published October, 1979 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

In selecting the actuarial assumptions for financial reporting under GAAP, the actuary will find it useful to refer to the assumptions which were used in calculating the corresponding gross premiums and to the rationale for their selection. The gross premium assumptions and the valuation assumptions need not be identical. Depending on the gross premium calculation method employed, the gross premium assumptions may be those considered most likely or may contain varying measures of conservatism, while the valuation assumptions must contain provisions for adverse deviations. Both sets of assumptions should be made with reference to the same underlying best estimate evaluation of future experience.

RECOMMENDATION 2: RELATIONS WITH THE AUDITOR

(Published April, 1974 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Recommendation supplements Opinion A-6 in giving important advice concerning the actuary's relations with the auditor in connection with review of financial statements of a stock life insurance company to be presented as having been prepared in accordance with "generally accepted accounting principles" as that term is understood in the United States.
2. The actuary will appreciate that if the auditor is unable to form an opinion on the basis of information furnished by the actuary the auditor may submit the actuary's findings to another qualified actuary for review, and in such case the actuary should make his material available to the other actuary and should himself be available for supplemental advice and explanation.
3. A consulting actuary who is engaged with an auditor in the same audit should prepare a written plan of coordination clearly setting forth the nature and scope of the actuary's responsibilities with respect to the audit. The actuary should clearly identify in writing to the auditor the basic records he has relied upon in the course of his work and should describe any interpretations relied upon (e.g., "valuation amounts" for decreasing term plans is initial amount, "age" for renewable term plans is original age, etc.) The actuary should clearly document his work and should either reconcile his figures with those appearing in published financial statements or should submit a letter to the auditor setting forth details of the figures he has reviewed and ask the auditor for a copy of his reconciliation to published financial statements.

INTERPRETATION 2-A: RELATIONS WITH THE AUDITOR

(Published April, 1974 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. When a public accountant audits financial statements of a life insurance company which are intended for publication or for filing with a regulatory authority such as the Securities and Exchange Commission, the auditor is required by the tenets of his profession to form and express an opinion as to whether the statements fairly reflect the operations and the condition of the company in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. The meaning of "generally accepted accounting principles" as applied to the financial reporting of a stock life insurance company is described in "Audits of Stock Life Insurance Companies," published by the AICPA.
2. Generally accepted accounting principles differ in certain material respects from accounting principles prescribed by state regulatory authorities and from those prescribed for life insurance companies by federal tax law. The Audit Guide's definitions of generally accepted accounting principles do not apply to financial statements prepared for such purposes, and an auditor who audits financial statements which are based on such other accounting requirements will be required to qualify his opinion appropriately.
3. Pages 63 and 64 of the Audit Guide comment on background material which is of concern to both actuaries and auditors. Pages 97 to 99 of the Audit Guide contain advice to the auditor on utilization of actuaries.

INTERPRETATION 2-B: DOCUMENTATION

(Published October, 1975 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. A consulting actuary engaged with an auditor to audit or review a financial statement of a stock life insurance company, or specified elements thereof, shall clearly document his work (Recommendation 2). It is prudent and reasonable to prepare documentation which both aids the actuary in his work and provides support for the actuarial report or opinion rendered pursuant to his audit or review.

2. Documentation should include an adequate and complete description of the nature and scope of the actuary's engagement and should be so clearly and systematically prepared that it will be possible at any time to determine from such documentation the procedures followed, the tests performed, the evidential matter collected, the conditions found, and the conclusions reached. Accordingly, documentation may include work programs, analyses, memoranda, letters of confirmation and representation, complete copies of or excerpts from company documents, and schedules or commentaries prepared or obtained by the actuary.
3. Documentation should fit the circumstances and the actuary's needs on the engagement to which it applies. The factors affecting the actuary's judgment as to quantity, type, and content of the documentation desirable for a particular engagement include (a) the nature and scope of the work undertaken and the report or opinion required pursuant thereto, (b) the nature and condition of the actuary's and/or company's records he reviews, and (c) the needs in the particular circumstance for supervision and review of the work performed by any assistants.
4. Although the quantity, type and content will vary with the circumstances, documentation should generally include or show:
   a) Information sufficient to demonstrate that the items audited or reviewed were in agreement with (or reconciled with) the company's records.
   b) That the actuary's activities had been planned and coordinated with auditor engaged in the audit or review.
   c) The procedures followed, tests performed, and documentary evidence collected to support findings and conclusions.
   d) The resolution of exceptional or unusual matters.
5. Such documentation shall be the property of the actuary. He should adopt reasonable procedures for its safe custody with particular regard for the provisions of item 2(b) of the Academy's Guide to Professional Conduct. The actuary should retain his documentation for a period of time sufficient to meet the needs of his work and to satisfy any pertinent legal requirements for record retention. While such documentation shall be the property of the actuary, he is, of course, subject to all applicable legal requirements. The enumeration of these is beyond the scope of this Interpretation.

RECOMMENDATION 3: ACTUARIAL REPORT AND STATEMENT OF ACTUARIAL OPINION

(Published April, 1972 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Recommendation applies to the work of an actuary who acts for a stock life insurance company in the preparation of its financial statements, who contributes elements for inclusion in any such financial statement, or who audits or reviews elements of such a financial statement, when such financial statement is to be presented as having been prepared in accordance with "generally accepted accounting principles" as that term is understood in the United States.

2. As used in This Recommendation and related Interpretations, "Actuarial Report" means the actuary's report to management and auditor referred to in Number 4 of Opinion A-6 on the Academy's Guide to Professional Conduct, and "Statement of Actuarial Opinion" means a statement of the acuary's opinion prepared for publication with financial statements, referred to in Numbers 2 and 5 of Opinion A-6. A written plan of coordination or other working communication of a consulting actuary to an auditor as referred to in paragraph 3 of Recommendation 2 is not an "Actuarial Report" or a "Statement of Actuarial Opinion" within the meaning of this Recommendation.

3. Any judgment as to the appropriateness of the actuarial assumptions used in preparing data for financial statements must be formed in the light of the purpose for which the statements are being prepared. Financial statements which are primarily intended to reflect a matching of revenues and costs in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles may require the use of actuarial assumptions which differ from those which would be used in, for example, financial statements which give primary emphasis to solvency for the protection of policyholders, as is the case with statements based on standards prescribed by state regulatory authorities.

4. Guide 4(d) provides, in part, that "When a member characterizes reserves as adequate, he shall either (i) assure himself that they meet any applicable statutory or regulatory standards or (ii) clearly qualify his characterization in this respect, including an explicit statement as to whether the reserves meet such statutory or regulatory standards."

Actuarial Report

5. Opinion A-6 provides (No. 4), "When an actuary's work relates to financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles, it is the opinion of the (Professional Conduct) Committee that Guide 2(c) requires as a minimum that an actuarial report should be furnished to the company and to the company's independent auditor, if any," and (No. 6), "It is the opinion of the (Professional Conduct) Committee that Guide 4(a) as applied to the actuary's work in connection with financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles requires that the actuary disclose to the auditor the actuarial assumptions and methods, including, where appropriate, an appraisal of their suitability for the purposes at hand and reference to factors which have not been considered."

6. An Actuarial Report should contain descriptions of the scope of the actuary's work and of the actuarial assumptions and methods used.

7. An Actuarial Report should contain expressions of the actuary's opinion as to whether the reserves and other actuarial items in the statements are based on assumptions which are appropriate to the purpose for which the statements were prepared, whether the methods employed are consistent with sound actuarial principles, and whether provision has been made for all actuarial reserves and related statement items which ought to be established. An Actuarial Report should also include a statement of the actuary's opinion as to whether any amount carried in the balance sheet on account of unamortized acquisition expenses and the amount of liabilities carried on account of other future policy obligations and expenses are fairly stated (i.e., neither materially understated nor materially overstated) in accordance with sound actuarial principles (c.f., Recommendation 1).

8. If the actuary is unable to form an opinion in any respect defined in paragraph 7, or if his opinion in any such report is adverse or qualified, the Actuarial Report should specifically state the reason.

9. Material changes in actuarial assumptions from those previously used should be disclosed in an Actuarial Report and their effects noted. Such disclosures should not be limited to factors explicitly assumed but should include reference to the handling, or absence of handling, of such other factors as the actuary in his judgment deems to have pertinence. The adoption for new issues of an actuarial assumption which differs from a corresponding assumption used for any prior issues is not a change in actuarial assumptions within the meaning of this paragraph.

10. The report should also compare (a) the amount of net liability for future policy obligations and expenses, less any amount of unamortized acquisition expenses, with (b) the amount of net liability for future policy obligations reported in financial statements filed with state regulatory authorities; and if (a) is less than (b) the report should state the amount of the difference. The "net liability" referred to in (a) and (b) above should reflect adjustments for deferred premiums and other related items.

Statement of Actuarial Opinion

11. Opinion A-6 states (No. 4) that the objective of Guide 2(c) will be more fully satisfied if the auditor's opinion identifies the actuary or if published financial statements include a formal Statement of Actuarial Opinion.

12. A written Statement of Actuarial Opinion prepared for publication with financial statements of a life insurance company will normally include statements as to the scope of the actuary's participation in the preparation and the appraisal of the financial statements, his professional opinion as to the actuarial elements in the statements, and a statement of his relationship to the company. Such Statement of Actuarial Opinion should cover the subjects referred to in paragraphs 6, 7, 8, 9, and 10 above, although normally without the supporting detail which would be appropriate in an Actuarial Report.

Other Actuarial Statements

13. In preparing any statement or report relating to a life insurance company, other than an Actuarial Report or Statement of Actuarial Opinion described in this Recommendation, the actuary should be aware of the Guides to Professional Conduct as interpreted by Opinions of the Professional Conduct Committee.

INTERPRETATION 3-A: ILLUSTRATIVE STATEMENTS OF ACTUARIAL OPINION

(Published April, 1974 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. A Statement of Actuarial Opinion will normally consist of a scope paragraph, describing the scope of the actuary's work and his relationship with the company, and an opinion paragraph identifying the subjects on which an opinion is to be expressed, and expressing such opinion. One or more additional paragraphs may be needed in individual cases if the actuary considers it necessary to state a qualification of his opinion or to explain some aspect of the financial statements which is not already sufficiently explained in a footnote.

2. The following are examples, for illustrative purposes, of language which in typical circumstances might be included in a Statement of Actuarial Opinion in connection with financial statements of a stock life insurance company prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles as that term is understood in the United States. The illustrative language should be modified as needed to meet the circumstances of a particular case, and the actuary should in any case use language which clearly expresses his professional judgment.

3. The scope paragraph of a Statement of Actuarial Opinion should contain a sentence which describes the facts of the actual situation, such as one of the following:

   a) "I am the Vice President of the X Life Insurance Company and am a Member of the American Academy of Actuaries."

   b) "I am associated with the firm of A & B, Consulting Actuaries, and am a Member of the American Academy of Actuaries. I have (have not) been involved in the preparation of the financial statements of the X Life Insurance Company."

4. The scope paragraph should also contain a sentence such as the following:

   "I have examined the Actuarial assumptions and actuarial methods used in determining future policy obligations and expenses, deferred acquisition expenses, and related actuarial items (list other material items) in the financial statements of the Company, as prepared by the Company to accord to generally accepted accounting principles, as of December 31, 19__, and December 31, 19__, and for the years then ended."

5. If the actuary has examined the underlying records the scope paragraph of a Statement of Actuarial Opinion might include a sentence such as the following:

   "My examination included such review of the actuarial assumptions and actuarial methods and of the underlying basic records and such tests of the actuarial calculations as I considered necessary."

   If the actuary has relied upon an independent auditor's review of basic in-force records the foregoing sentence might be preceded by a sentence such as the following:

   "I relied upon the auditor's verification of basic in-force records."

   In such case the sentence as first suggested above might commence:

   "In other respects my examination (etc.)."

6. The expressions of opinion described in paragraph 7 of Recommendation 3 might be expressed as follows:

   "In my opinion the amounts carried in the balance sheet on account of unamortized acquisition expenses and on account of other future policy obligations and expenses are computed by sound actuarial methods consistently applied and are fairly stated in accordance with sound actuarial principles, and are based on actuarial assumptions which are appropriate to financial statements of the Company prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles and which are consistent with the assumptions previously employed; and provision has been made for all actuarial reserves and related statement items which ought to be established."

   If there has been any change in the actuarial assumptions or methods from those previously employed, that change should be described in a footnote to the financial statements or in a previous paragraph of the Statement of Actuarial Opinion, and the reference above to consistency should be modified by inserting a phrase such as:

   ". . . with the exception of the change described in the preceding paragraph (or in footnote__) . . ."

7. The comparison of net liabilities referred to in paragraph 10 of Recommendation 3 might be stated as in one of the following examples, or in such other way as meets the circumstances of a particular case:

   a) The amount of net liability for future policy obligations and expenses, less the amount of unamortized acquisition expenses is, $____ less than the amount of net liability for future policy obligations reported in financial statements filed with the Insurance Commissioner of the State of_____.

b) The amount of net liability for future policy obligations and expenses, less the amount of unamortized acquisition expenses, plus an amount of $____ provided for in restricted surplus, is at least equal to the amount of net liability for future policy obligations reported in financial statements filed with the Insurance Commissioner of the State of_____.

c) The amount of net liability for future policy obligations and expenses, less the amount of unamortized acquisition expenses, is at least equal to the amount of net liability for future policy obligations reported in financial statements filed with the Insurance Commissioner of the State of_____.

8. The text of an Actuarial Report is likely to be much more detailed and more extensive than the text of a Statement of Actuarial Opinion, and the form is likely to be controlled by the nature and extent of the information to be recorded.

RECOMMENDATION 4: REINSURANCE CEDED BY LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

(Published April, 1974 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Recommendation applies to the treatment of ceded reinsurance in financial statements of a stock life insurance company to be presented as having been prepared in accordance with "generally accepted accounting principles" as that term is understood in the United States.
2. When reserves are computed according to generally accepted accounting principles, the cost of reinsurance ceded should be taken into consideration in the same manner as other costs. An equivalent alternative to recognizing the cost directly in the reserve calculation is to calculate the reserves without consideration of reinsurance and calculate an adjustment to this reserve for the ceded reinsurance. Although this adjustment is frequently referred to as a "reinsurance reserve credit," it is important to keep in mind that it is actually an adjustment of the basic reserve and has no special independent significance. In particular, there is no necessary relationship between the reinsurance reserve adjustment of the reinsured company and the reserve for the reinsurance accepted established by the reinsurer (except in the case of affiliated companies filing consolidated statements).
3. In determining the reinsurance cost, it is appropriate to take into consideration the expected value of all transactions between the reinsurer and the reinsured including reinsurance premiums, claim reimbursements, experience refunds, and any other benefits or expenses reimbursed by the reinsurer. Because the reinsurance reserve adjustment relates to the reserves for the basic policy, it is important that the assumptions for the reinsurance adjustment be consistent with the original assumptions. When testing for recoverability of acquisition expenses or when testing for the necessity for reserve strengthening to recognize future losses, the expected cost of the reinsurance must be taken into consideration.

4. In practice, the degree of materiality of reinsurance adjustments is such that most companies will be able to use simplified approaches without materially distorting their financial statements. For example, for YRT, most companies will find it convenient to calculate, as the reinsurance adjustment, the statutory reserve credit, the unearned reinsurance premium, or, possibly, no adjustment at all. For coinsurance where the conditions of the reinsurance parallel those of the original insurance, the adjustment to the benefit reserve would usually be proportional to the benefit reserve computed prior to adjustment for reinsurance and the expense reserve would need to be adjusted to reflect the amount and incidence of expenses reimbursed by the reinsurer. The same approach would be appropriate for modified coinsurance whenever the interest component of the reinsurance reserve transfer is computed in a manner consistent with the interest assumption in the benefit reserves. The resulting benefit reserve must then be increased by the amount of the reinsurance reserves transferred to the company under the reinsurance arrangement. Special consideration must be given to those reinsurance arrangements where the conditions of the reinsurance do not parallel those of the original insurance.

INTERPRETATION 4-A: REINSURANCE APPROXIMATIONS

(Published June, 1978 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

Paragraph 4 of Recommendation 4 says, in part, that "the degree of materiality of reinsurance adjustments is such that most companies will be able to use simplified approaches without materially distorting their financial statements". This Interpretation seeks to remind the actuary that there will be situations when special care should be given to the assessment of the materiality of a "simplified approach".

When the amount of reinsurance ceded is a substantial proportion of the total amount of insurance in force with the ceding company, or when unconventional, or "special" reinsurance arrangements are in effect, it is incumbent on the actuary to use the approximations suggested in paragraph 4 only after extensive tests have satisfied him or her that such approximations do not introduce material distortion into the ceding company's financial statements.

For further background and insight into the subject of accounting for reinsurance ceded, the actuary is directed to pages 397-413 (especially page 411 for yearly renewable term reinsurance) of Volume XXVII of the Transactions of the Society of Actuaries.

RECOMMENDATION 5: RECOGNITION OF PREMIUMS

(Published April, 1974 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Recommendation relates to the recognition of premiums in financial statements of a stock life insurance company to be presented as having been prepared in accordance with "generally accepted accounting principles" as that term is understood in the United States.

2. The timing of recognition of premium revenue should be consistent for corresponding gross and valuation premiums. (Such valuation premiums are the premiums required to maintain the reserves, based upon the actuarial methods and assumptions used in determining such reserves. The reserves relate to all elements affecting costs—i.e., all benefits and all expenses, excluding any specific loading for profit.) Depending on the revenue assumption employed, the items included in premium income and the change of reserves will vary among companies and between various types of insurance. To the extent that premiums are recognized as revenue in accounting periods different from the accounting periods in which the premiums are received, appropriate asset or liability premium accrual amounts are necessary. It is necessary that the valuation system recognize premiums in the same accounting period as premiums are recognized as revenue. Appropriate adjustments must be made in assets or liabilities to accomplish this.
3. In the absence of any specific adjustment the difference, if any, between gross premiums and valuation premiums will be reflected in net income for the accounting period in which the premiums are recognized as revenue. To the extent such recognition of this difference as net income is inappropriate, adjustments in assets or liabilities must be made in order to recognize it as net income in the appropriate accounting period. It would generally be considered inappropriate to recognize as net income the excess of gross premiums over valuation premiums for premiums not yet due. The inclusion of premiums not yet due in revenue may be justified on the grounds of established usage and of consistency with statutory practices. There is no corresponding historical precedent that would permit the recognition of the associated profit margin in net income.
4. The timing of the recognition in net income of the difference between gross premiums and valuation premiums is significant and, if the amount involved is material, there should be disclosure in the Actuarial Report. It is important that this timing be consistent from one accounting period to the next.

INTERPRETATION NO. 5-A: RECOGNITION OF PREMIUMS FOR INDIVIDUAL LIFE INSURANCE (OTHER THAN CREDIT)

(Published July, 1975 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Interpretation relates to questions which may arise with respect to individual life insurance contracts in relating gross premium revenue recognition to the recognition of valuation premiums in the reserving structure.
2. The Committee took note of four methods which have been used for recognizing gross premiums in revenue. These are discussed in paragraphs 4-7. These methods represent acceptable actuarial practice, but it is the responsibility of the accountant to determine in each case whether a particular method represents acceptable accounting practice.

The four methods are:

Method #	Brief Description	Key Words of Description	Described in Paragraph #
1	Premiums are recognized only when they are both due and paid.	Due and Paid	4
2	Premiums are recognized when due.	Due	5
3	Premiums are recognized continuously throughout the year.	Continuous	6
4	The entire premium for a policy year is recognized at the beginning of that policy year.	Statutory	7

3. Under each method, consistency of recognition of premium revenue for corresponding gross and valuation premiums depends upon the proper handling of a number of financial statement items including: gross premium accrual amounts, any valuation premium accrual amounts, and accruals of expense provisions (provided by the reserving structure) related to the premium accruals.[1] These items also affect the timing of the recognition in net income of any profit margin (any excess of the gross premium over the corresponding valuation premium) and the timing of the release from the reserves into net income of provisions for adverse deviation. Accordingly, each method is discussed under the following headings: (a) gross premium, (b) valuation premium, (c) other items, and (d) net income.

4. Method #1: Premiums are recognized only when they are both due and paid.

   a) Gross premium:

   The increase in the gross advance premiums[2] is subtracted from the gross collected premiums to obtain gross premium revenue. The amount of gross advance premiums is a liability. No asset will be held on account of deferred premiums or uncollected premiums.

[1]For example: Suppose reserve factors assume that with respect to a premium due on the second policy anniversary a commission of $80.00 is payable; hence, the assumption of $80.00 of expense upon payment of the premium due on the second anniversary is built into the reserving system. Suppose further that at the end of an accounting period this premium is due but unpaid. The reserving system contained an expense provision of $80.00 which pertains to the premium accrual of the gross premium due on the second anniversary and was "released" on the date that premium was due.

[2]"Advance premium" is used throughout this Interpretation to refer to a premium paid prior to but due after the valuation date. Deferred premium is used here to

b) Valuation premium:

If the reserve computation has assumed that the full annual premium has been paid (as is the case for the "mean" reserve type computation), then the pro rata valuation premiums corresponding to the gross deferred premiums and to the gross uncollected premiums are applied to reduce the portion of the reserve carried as a liability and to increase any portion of the reserve carried as a deferred charge.

c) Other items:

If the reserve computation has assumed that the full annual premium has been paid, the amount of the provision (according to the assumptions underlying the reserving system) for expenses expected to be incurred upon the collection of deferred premiums and uncollected premiums should be applied to adjust the appropriate portion of the reserve or set up as a liability.

The amount of expense provision associated with the collection of advance premiums should be set up as a deferred charge and the change in this deferred charge reflected in the income statement. (Alternatively, such expense may be applied to reduce gross advance premiums.) The increase in reserve item in the income statement will not reflect any increase in reserves on account of the valuation premium associated with gross deferred or uncollected premiums.

The income statement will not contain any item representing the increase in any profit margin related to deferred premiums or uncollected premiums.

d) Net income:

Any profit margin related to deferred or uncollected premiums is neither included as an asset nor taken into net income until the accounting period during which such premiums are received.

5. Method #2: Premiums are recognized when due. Those premiums which are due but uncollected at the end of an accounting period are taken into revenue. Deferred premiums are handled as in Method #1.

a) Gross premium:

The increase in the gross advance premiums is subtracted from, and the increase in the gross due but uncollected premiums is added to gross collected premiums to obtain gross premium revenue. The amount of gross advance premiums is a liability. An asset will be held on account of the gross premiums which are due but uncollected. There will be no asset held on account of deferred premiums.

refer to a premium which is not yet due, but which will be due before the end of the current policy year. This Interpretation relates to advance premiums before application of any discount; the accounting for such discount is not within the scope of this Interpretation.

b) Valuation premium:

If the reserve computation has assumed that the full annual premium has been paid, the pro rata valuation premiums corresponding to the gross deferred premiums are applied to reduce the portion of the reserve carried as a liability and to increase any portion of the reserve carried as a deferred charge.

c) Other items:

If the reserve computation has assumed that the full annual premium has been paid, the amount of the provision (according to the assumptions underlying the reserving system) for expenses expected to be incurred upon the collection of deferred premiums and uncollected premiums should be applied to adjust the appropriate portion of the reserve or set up as a liability.

The amount of expense provision associated with the collection of advance premiums should be set up as a deferred charge and the change in this deferred charge reflected in the income statement. (Alternatively, such expense may be applied to reduce gross advance premiums.) The increase in reserve item in the income statement will not reflect any increase in reserves on account of the valuation premium associated with gross deferred premiums, but will reflect any increase in reserves on account of the valuation premium associated with gross uncollected premiums.

The probability of noncollection of due but uncollected premiums must be recognized (see paragraph 9).

d) Net income:

Any profit margin in the gross premiums is recognized as the premiums are due, subject to the provision for noncollection of due but uncollected premiums. Any profit margin related to deferred premiums is neither included as an asset nor taken into net income until the accounting period during which such premiums are due.

6. Method #3: Gross premiums are recognized continuously throughout the policy year.

a) Gross premium:

A liability is established for gross advance and unearned premiums[3] and an asset is established for gross due and uncollected premiums, a portion of which may also be included in the unearned premium liability. The increase in gross advance and unearned premiums is subtracted from and the increase in gross uncollected premiums is added to gross collected premiums to obtain gross premium revenue.

b) Valuation premium:

If the reserve computation has assumed that the premium has been paid continuously (as is the case for the "mid-terminal" method of interim reserve computation), no adjustment for premiums is applied to either portion of the reserve, either that portion carried as a liability or any portion carried as a deferred charge.

c) Other items:

If the reserve computation has assumed the release of expense provisions continuously, the amount of the provision (according to the assumptions underlying the reserving system) for expenses expected to be incurred upon the collection of uncollected premiums should be applied to adjust the appropriate portion of the reserve.

The amount of any expense provision proportionate to the unearned premium and the amount of expense provision associated with the collection of advance premiums should be set up as a deferred charge and the change in this deferred charge reflected in the income statement. (Alternatively, such expense may be applied to reduce the liability for gross advance and unearned premiums.) The increase in reserve item in the income statement will reflect any increase in reserves on account of the valuation premium associated with the gross uncollected premiums.

The probability of noncollection of due but uncollected premiums must be recognized (see paragraph 9).

d) Net income:

Any profit margin in the gross premiums is recognized continuously throughout the policy year. The profit margin on earned premiums is recognized whether the premiums are paid or unpaid, subject to provision for noncollection of due but uncollected premiums. The profit margin on unearned premiums is excluded.

7. Method #4: The entire premium for a policy year is recognized at the beginning of that policy year. Although this method is the one most commonly used for statutory accounting, its treatment of deferred premiums does not conform to Rule 7A-03-4 of SEC Regulation S-X, as revised February 14, 1974, and therefore is not used in financial statements prepared in accordance with generally accepted accounting principles. It is mentioned here only for completeness.

8. Under each method, the proper handling of the various statement items (including: gross premium accrual amounts, valuation premium accrual amounts, and accruals of expense provisions relating to the premium accrual) depends upon the formula used in the reserve computation. As one example, if Method #2 (premiums recognized when due) is used and the underlying reserve formula is of the "mid-terminal" type (which assumes premiums are paid continuously and expense provisions are released with corresponding timing), then the adjustments described in paragraph 5 will be modified to the following.

   a) Gross premium:

   The increase in the gross advance premiums is subtracted from, and the increase in the gross due but uncollected premiums is added to gross collected premiums to obtain gross premium revenue. The amount of gross advance premiums is a liability. An asset will be held on account of the gross premiums which are due but uncollected. There will be no asset held on account of deferred premiums.

   b) Valuation premium:

   Since the reserve computation has assumed that the premium has been paid continuously, the valuation premiums corresponding to the gross unearned premiums are applied to increase the portion of the reserve carried as a liability and to decrease any portion of the reserve carried as a deferred charge.

   c) Other items:

   If the reserve computation has assumed the release of expense provisions continuously, the amount of the provision (according to the assumptions underlying the reserving system) for expenses expected to be incurred upon the collection of uncollected premiums should be applied to adjust the appropriate portion of the reserve or set up as a liability.

   The amount of any expense provision proportionate to unearned premium and the amount of expense provision associated with the collection of advance premiums should be a deferred charge and the change in this deferred charge reflected in the income statement. The increase in reserve item in the income statement will reflect any increase in reserves on account of the valuation premium associated with gross uncollected premiums and with gross unearned premiums.

   The probability of noncollection of due but uncollected premiums must be recognized (see paragraph 9).

   d) Net income:

   Any profit margin in the gross premiums is recognized as the premiums are due, subject to the provision for noncollection of due but uncollected premiums. Any profit margin related to deferred premiums is neither included as an asset nor taken into net income until the accounting period during which such premiums are due.

9. Two procedures for recognizing the probability of noncollection of due but uncollected premiums (referred to in paragraphs 5*c* and 6*c*) are:

   a) establishing an appropriate liability and charging in the income statement an amount equal to the increase in that liability, and

   b) where appropriate as an approximation, not counting as an asset any gross premium more than a selected number of days past due.

10. Under Method #1 and Method #2, it is an acceptable alternative to exclude the entire profit margin on the unearned premiums, and under Method #2 and Method #3, it is an acceptable alternative to exclude the entire profit margin on the due and uncollected premiums. Such exclusion can be accomplished by including in the income statement an item representing the increase in the profit margin to be excluded and establishing a liability for the amount of such profit margin.

11. If a portion of the current year's premium is due and uncollected (whether or not it is recognized in revenue), the reserve liability for future policy obligations should be determined as of the valuation date (as opposed to the date to which premiums have been paid).

12. This Interpretation assumes that each premium paying policy has a premium due on its policy anniversary. Where circumstances differ, appropriate adjustments should be considered.

13. A company's revenue, outgo, net income, assets, liabilities, and surplus accounts are affected to some extent by the method adopted. The actuary should be aware of these effects.

14. The method of recognizing premiums should be disclosed in the Actuarial Report, which should state whether the method used is consistent with the method previously used. If the method is changed, the Actuarial Report should state whether the actuary agrees with the change.

INTERPRETATION 5-B: RECOGNITION OF PREMIUMS FOR INDIVIDUAL HEALTH INSURANCE (OTHER THAN CREDIT)

(Published July, 1975 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Interpretation relates to questions which may arise with respect to individual health insurance contracts in relating gross premium revenue recognition to the recognition of valuation premiums in the reserving structure.

2. Individual health insurance contracts "which are expected to be in force for a reasonable period of time and for which elements of expense or benefit cost are not level" (cf. Audit Guide, page 71) are treated like individual life insurance for purposes of premium recognition. Interpretation 5-A applies to any form of individual health insurance, regardless of the renewal provisions provided in the policy, if it is expected that the policy may be renewed over a period of years with reasonably predictable persistency.

3. Other individual health insurance contracts (except credit) where the policy is not expected to be in force for a reasonable period of time will generally have a term of one year or less. The gross premiums for such contracts are recognized as revenue on a pro rata basis over the period covered by the premium. An unearned gross premium[1] should be computed either on a pro rata basis or by a reasonable approximation thereto. The unearned gross premium may be used in either of two ways, depending on the accounting practices of the company, as follows:

   a) Gross premiums may be recognized as revenue in the same way as for individual life insurance, and the increase in the unearned gross premium will be charged in the income statement like changes in life insurance reserves. This method is most commonly used by life insurance companies.

   b) Premium revenue may be decreased by the amount of increase during the accounting period in the gross unearned premium. This is the method commonly used by casualty insurance companies.

   In either case, the reserving structure should take expense into account in whatever way is necessary to relate expenses to revenue. In the interest of practicality, the amount of any deferred charge for acquisition expenses may be applied to reduce unearned gross premium; but this approach is appropriate only when acquisition expenses are to be spread over a period of one year or less.

4. Interpretation 5-A applies to the extent not inconsistent with the above.

INTERPRETATION 5-C: RECOGNITION OF PREMIUMS FOR CREDIT INSURANCE

(Published July, 1975 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Interpretation relates to questions which may arise with respect to credit life and credit health insurance contracts, both individual and group, in relating gross premium revenue recognition to the recognition of valuation premiums in the reserving structure.

2. The protection under credit insurance contracts is directly associated with a loan agreement or sales contract. Under single premium contracts, the entire premium for the insurance on an individual is paid at the inception of his coverage. Under monthly outstanding balance contracts, premiums are paid monthly for the protection granted during the period on each person covered under one master contract.

3. Regardless of the type of coverage or manner of premium recognition, the reserving structure or other liability items should take into account the expenses related to the contract, premium taxes, retrospective commission or experience refund arrangements, and any other pertinent items.

4. Monthly Outstanding Balance Contracts:

   In determining premium revenue for these contracts, the gross unearned portion[1] of any premium which has been recognized as being received may be determined by the monthly pro rata method.

5. Single Premium Contracts:

   Premiums for these contracts are recognized as revenue by subtracting from the gross collected premium any increase in the gross unearned portion of the premiums.

   a) Credit Life Insurance:

   "Gross premium revenues on such contracts should be recognized in proportion to the amounts of insurance in force" (cf. Audit Guide, p. 69).

   Thus the gross unearned portion of the premiums is generally determinable (i) by the sum-of-the-digits (or Rule of 78) method for decreasing term contracts, and (ii) by the straightline pro rata method for level term contracts. (More sophisticated techniques may be required for contracts of terms longer than 4 or 5 years.)

   In practice, the gross premiums may be recognized as revenue as for individual life insurance. In this case, the reserving structure and other liabilities together must include an amount equivalent to the gross unearned premium determined as described above, and in addition recognize expenses, etc.

   b) Credit Health Insurance:

   "Gross premiums should be recognized as revenues over the stated period of the contract in reasonable relationship to the anticipated claims" (cf. Audit Guide, p. 71). Net single premiums for anticipated future claims may be determined with reference to tables such as those published in the Proceedings of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, for 1968 and 1970, or to tables based on the company's own experience. The gross unearned portion of the premium may be determined as a fraction of the gross single premium for the contract, the fraction being equal to the ratio of (i) the net single premium for anticipated future claims as of the valuation date to (ii) the net single premium for anticipated future claims as of the date of issue of the contract, both based on an appropriate table, as mentioned above.

[1]The terms "unearned portion" and "unearned premium," etc., as used here mean the unearned portion of a current premium payment. It has been pointed out elsewhere that all reserves for future policy obligations are "unearned premium reserves." (cf. 1965 Proceedings of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners, pp. 74-75.)

The value of the gross unearned premium thus determined will generally lie between the values determined by the "straight-line pro rata" and "Rule of 78" methods, so that a weighted average of the latter two values may be used. For many companies, tests will indicate that the value determined with reference to the NAIC tables is very close to the mean of the latter two.

In practice, as for credit life insurance, the gross premiums may be recognized as revenue as for individual life insurance. In this case, the reserving structure and other liabilities together must include an amount equivalent to the gross unearned premium determined as described above, and in addition recognize expenses, etc.

6. Profit Recognition:

   The profit margins contained in the gross premiums for these coverages should be distributed among time periods in the same proportions as the recognition of the premiums in revenue.

7. Interpretation 5-A applies to the extent not inconsistent with the above.

RECOMMENDATION 6: PARTICIPATING POLICIES SOLD BY STOCK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

(Published July, 1976 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Recommendation relates to the actuarial methods and assumptions with respect to the accounting treatment of participating insurance in financial statements of a stock life insurance company, to be presented as having been prepared in accordance with "generally accepted accounting principles" as that term is understood in the United States.
2. Participating insurance differs from non-participating insurance in that the participating policyholder is contractually entitled to participate in the distribution of surplus. Such distribution, in the form of policy dividends, is determined annually by company management, at its discretion, subject to any legal or other restrictions affecting such distribution.
3. The primary focus of GAAP accounting for participating business is to ensure that there be excluded from stockholders' profits in any accounting period that portion of profits on participating business (hereinafter called "participating profits") with respect to such period which will not ultimately inure to the benefit of the stockholders. Actuarial judgment is frequently required to determine the stockholders' portion of current period profits.

4. In determining the stockholders' portion of participating profits, the actuary should recognize any restrictions on the distribution of profits to stockholders (whether imposed by law, regulation, contract, company charter or practice, or otherwise), company policy with regard to the distribution of participating profits, and any other factors which might influence the division of profits between stockholders and policyholders.

5. In selecting actuarial methods and assumptions for the calculation of reserves and determination of participating profits, the actuary should be guided by actuarial principles analogous to those outlined for non-participating policies in Recommendation 1 (and Interpretations thereof), and should recognize the nature of participating business and the company's practices with regard to policyholder dividend distribution.

6. It should be recognized that among stock companies there are differences as to the practices followed in determining policyholder dividends. For example, in one company dividends may be a means of distributing profits from participating business in approximate proportion to the sources of the profits. In another company, dividends may have little relation to actual profits. It would be inappropriate to generalize for the accounting treatment of participating business a single standard principle that does not recognize such differences.

7. Caution should be exercised to ensure appropriate treatment of dividends payable in the succeeding accounting period. Any separate liability established for such dividends should take account of any provision already made in the reserve calculation. Moreover, establishing a liability for the full amount of such dividends may have a distorting effect, unless some offset is provided elsewhere.

8. With respect to participating business, the Actuarial Report, which is discussed in Recommendation 3, should disclose both the nature of any restriction affecting the distribution of the profits from such business, and the actuarial methods that have been employed in determining profits to stockholders. If such information is not disclosed elsewhere in the financial statements, it should be disclosed in the Statement of Actuarial Opinion, which is also discussed in Recommendation 3.

INTERPRETATION 6-A: DETERMINATION OF STOCKHOLDERS' PORTION OF PARTICIPATING PROFITS

(Published July, 1976 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This interpretation relates to actuarial considerations involved in the determination of the stockholders' portion of participating profits of stock life insurance companies, in accordance with Recommendation 6.

2. The method of determination of the stockholders' portion of participating profits will vary depending on the restrictions imposed on the distribution of such profits by law, regulation, contract, company charter or practice, or otherwise. When such restrictions exist, a Participating Policyholders' Account should be established to record the portion of accumulated participating profits that is not available to stockholders. Current participating profits in excess of the imposed restriction would be credited, and policyholder dividend disbursements would be charged, to this account.

3. The simplest situation is the company for which all of the participating profits inure to policyholders. In this case, all participating profits should be excluded from stockholders' equity by appropriate charges and should be credited to the Participating Policyholders' Account.

4. Approaches to the determination of stockholders' profits from a typical established, on-going line of participating business are presented in paragraphs 5, 6, and 7 for each of three categories of restrictions:

   a. Stockholders' portion limited to a percentage of participating profits;

   b. Stockholders' portion limited to a constant per thousand of participating insurance in force;

   c. Stockholders' portion limited to the greater of 4.a or 4.b.

   Suitable modifications of these approaches are likely to be required when the participating business is newly introduced or running off, or otherwise changing markedly. Such modifications should recognize the operation of any restrictions that are applicable only to the current year's profits, as well as those applicable to cumulative profits. In addition, such modifications should be disciplined by the fact that, over the lifetime of the participating operation, profits inuring to shareholders cannot exceed profits remaining after dividends to policyholders.

5. If the limit on the stockholders' portion is, for example, 10% of participating statutory profits, then 90% of pre-dividend participating GAAP profits would be credited to the Participating Policyholders' Account. In this situation, the difference between the stockholders' portion (10%) of statutory profits and the stockholders' portion (10%) of GAAP profits is treated as a timing difference.

6. If the limit on the stockholders' portion is, for example, 50¢ per thousand of participating insurance in force, all participating GAAP profits in excess of 50¢ per thousand would be credited to the Participating Policyholders' Account. In this situation, there are no timing differences.

7. If the limit is, for example, the greater of 10% of statutory profits or 50¢ per thousand of participating insurance in force, the actuary should consider which of the two limits is likely to predominate in statutory statements in future years.

a. When the 10% limit is likely to govern in most future years, it would generally be appropriate to report as stockholders' profits 10% of pre-dividend participating GAAP profits for the year. In this case, any additional amounts arising from the alternate limit should be taken into stockholder profits at the appropriate times. One possible approach to the recognition of such additional amounts would be to credit the stockholders with 10% of pre-dividend participating GAAP profits for the period or, if greater, the excess of (i) cumulative stockholder statutory profits as defined by the restriction over (ii) cumulative stockholder GAAP profits from the participating branch reported up to the beginning of the period.

b. When the 10% limit is not likely to govern in most future years, it would generally be appropriate to report stockholders' profits equal to the amount determined by the actual current limitation (i.e., 50¢ per thousand or 10% of statutory profits).

8. There may be circumstances where a company has no formal restrictions on the distribution of participating profits to stockholders, or where dividends have little relation to actual profits, or where the amount of participating profits to be retained for stockholders is expected to be substantially less than the limit defined by the restriction, or where dividends to policyholders are expected to exceed available participating profits before dividends. In situations such as these, it may be appropriate to calculate reserves using a formula which treats dividends directly as future disbursements, as described in paragraph 2.c of Interpretation 6-B. If reserves are so calculated, then in the absence of restrictions, all of the participating profits emerging, after policyholder dividends, would be deemed to inure to stockholders, no separate Participating Policyholders' Account would exist, and dividends would be charged to current operations. Where restrictions do exist, profits in excess of such restrictions would be credited to the Participating Policyholders' Account.

9. "Loss recognition tests" for reserve strengthening should be applied with a view to the extent to which future losses may inure to stockholders, recognizing the ability and willingness of the company to reduce future dividends to absorb future losses. If future dividends are likely to be reduced, the test for reserve strengthening would normally consider such reductions. However, if present dividend levels are likely to be maintained even in the event of future losses, such dividends should be incorporated into the reserving formula in the loss recognition tests.

10. In any situation it is likely that considerable judgment will be required. In the course of judging whether the approach is reasonable, the actuary should consider the following questions:

a. Will reported stockholders' profits over the lifetime of the participating operation actually inure to the stockholders under the applicable restrictions?

b. Will past and/or future dividend payments to stockholders reduce the amount available to stockholders below the amount which would otherwise be indicated by the applicable restrictions?

c. Will stockholders' profits be reported in a reasonable manner? Will there be material fluctuations in reported stockholders' profits from year to year, even in the absence of unexpectedly favorable or adverse fluctuations?

INTERPRETATION 6-B: CHOICE OF ACTUARIAL RESERVING METHODS AND ASSUMPTIONS FOR PARTICIPATING POLICIES SOLD BY STOCK LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES

(Published July, 1976 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This interpretation relates to the choice of actuarial methods and assumptions with respect to reserves for participating insurance issued by stock life insurance companies, in accordance with Recommendation 6.

2. The following three approaches have substantial support within the actuarial profession as satisfying actuarial principles in particular circumstances. Approaches 2.a and 2.b are intended for use in determining pre-dividend participating profits in situations where there are restrictions on distribution of participating profits to stockholders.

   a. Treat policy dividends as distributions of pre-dividend profits (not as disbursements in the reserve calculations), and employ reserve assumptions containing provisions for adverse deviation which are comparable to those used for the company's non-participating business.

      This approach is consistent with that interpretation of the release-from-risk reserving theory which holds that reserve assumptions should be based on reasonable and realistic conservatism, which is not necessarily related to gross premiums.

      Under this approach, the portion of pre-dividend profits which would emerge in the form of a percentage of premium would be substantially larger than under non-participating business, because of the larger participating premiums. Existing restrictions would, in the typical case, cause the bulk of pre-dividend profits released to flow directly to the Participating Policyholders' Account, from which policyholder dividends would be disbursed. Thus, only a small proportion of such profits would normally be reported as profits available to stockholders.

   b. Treat dividends as in 2.a, but employ reserve assumptions consistent with gross premium assumptions, containing substantial provisions for the risk of adverse deviation. Such provisions would normally be much larger than those for non-participating business, recognizing the larger provisions for adverse deviation contained in gross premiums.

This approach is consistent with the interpretation of the release-from-risk reserving theory which holds that conservatism contained in gross premiums to cover the risk of adverse deviation should be retained in reserves and not released into profits until the company is released from the risks provided for by the gross premiums.

This approach would release, as pre-dividend profits on participating business, relatively large provisions for the risks of adverse deviation incorporated in reserve assumptions as the company is released from those risks. As in 2.a, existing restrictions would, in the typical case, cause the bulk of pre-dividend profits to flow to the Participating Policyholders' Account, from which dividend disbursements would be made, and only a small proportion of such profits would normally be reported as profits available to stockholders.

c. Treat dividends as disbursements in the reserve calculations, and employ reserve assumptions appropriately consistent with experience which would support the continuation of the dividend scale, and disciplined by the level of gross premiums as in Recommendation 1. The provisions for the risk of adverse deviation might reasonably be less than the provisions used for non-participating insurance, because of the possibility of reducing dividends if experience is adverse. In addition, there would usually be less margin between the valuation premium on most likely assumptions and the gross premium (because of the treatment of dividends as disbursements in the valuation formulae), so that the provision for the risk of adverse deviation which could be incorporated in reserve assumptions would necessarily be smaller.

Such an approach would be followed under situations such as those described in paragraph 8 of Interpretation 6-A where it is appropriate to incorporate dividends into the reserving formula. Use of this approach in situations where restrictions exist may lead to complications in ensuring that amounts prevented by the restrictions from inuring to stockholders are not included in current stockholder profits.

3. It should be noted that, if there are any restrictions on the share of profits from participating business which may inure to the benefit of stockholders, any variation in the choice of reserve method or assumptions will have only a limited effect on the stockholders' profits from this business. In this instance, the actuary should recognize that, although his choice of assumptions will affect the incidence of emergence of profits on this business, a share (perhaps the major portion) of any amount so released will flow directly from the policy reserves to the Participating Policyholders' Account.

RECOMMENDATION 7: STATEMENT OF ACTUARIAL OPINION FOR LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY STATUTORY ANNUAL-STATEMENTS

(Revised June, 1978 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Recommendation delineates the responsibility of the actuary in signing the type of statement of actuarial opinion which is described in the Instructions to the NAIC life and accident and health blank as adopted at the June 1975 meeting of the NAIC Blanks Subcommittee. Such opinion relates to the policy and contract reserves and other actuarial items contained in an Annual Statement of a Life Insurance Company to a state regulatory authority, i.e., the "Statutory Statement."

2. The Instructions require that such a statement express the opinion of the actuary as to whether such reserves and other actuarial items:

   (i) are computed in accordance with commonly accepted actuarial standards consistently applied and are fairly stated in accordance with sound actuarial principles,

   (ii) are based on actuarial assumptions which produce reserves at least as great as those called for in any policy or contract provision as to reserve basis and method, and are in accordance with all other policy or contract provisions,

   (iii) meet the requirements of the insurance laws of (state of domicile),

   (iv) make a good and sufficient provision for all unmatured obligations of the company guaranteed under the terms of its policies,

   (v) are computed on the basis of assumptions consistent with those used in computing the corresponding items in the annual statement of the preceding yearend,

   (vi) include provision for all actuarial reserves and related statement items which ought to be established.

   Paragraphs 4 through 9 comment on these six responsibilities.

3. The Statement of Actuarial Opinion should list the items and amounts on which the actuary expresses an opinion. The list should include but not necessarily be limited to the aggregate reserve for life policies and contracts (Exhibit 8 of the Statement), aggregate reserve for accident and health policies (Exhibit 9 of the Statement), net deferred and uncollected premiums, and policy and contract claims liability at the end of the current year (Exhibit 11, Part 1 of the Statement). The actuary need not extend his or her review to items other than those specified in the Instructions, except possibly in instances where such items are computed by means of a long-term discounting of future payments which are dependent upon the occurrence of events in the future. Examples of such items might include additional reserves for optional modes of settlement at maturity, optional nonforfeiture benefits, additional reserves for excess mortality under group conversion policies, reserves involving life contingencies under Separate Account contracts; reserves for group pension deposit type contracts, and other such items if not included in Exhibits 8, 9 and 11, Part 1.

4. "Commonly accepted actuarial standards" and "sound actuarial principles" emerge from the utilization and adaptation of concepts described in actuarial literature. Such literature includes the Recommendations and Interpretations of the American Academy of Actuaries; the professional journals of the Society of Actuaries, its predecessors, the Conference of Actuaries in Public Practice and the Casualty Actuarial Society; recognized actuarial textbooks; and regulations of the National Association of Insurance Commissioners and of State Insurance Departments. The Study Notes for candidates for membership in the Society of Actuaries are also valuable parts of the literature, but it should be kept in mind that the Study Notes are intended primarily to teach basic principles rather than to specify operating instructions. The actuary's judgment in developing the standards for the actuarial computation must take into account the specific characteristics of the policies with respect to which the actuary is expressing an opinion.

5. A significant element in the examination of actuarial assumptions and methods is a consideration of the policy and contract provisions affecting the reserves or other actuarial items which ought to be established. The following is a list of examples—not intended to be complete—of policy provisions which should be considered: the contractual treatment of fractional premiums paid beyond the date of death; interest guarantees under premium or retirement deposit funds; conversion rights under renewable and convertible term policies; rate guarantees under optional settlement provisions; extended benefits under Group policies; and maternity benefits.

6. The actuary should also check the valuation requirements of the state of domicile of the company on whose reserves he or she is expressing an opinion. The actuary should be aware of the prescribed valuation procedures; the minimum reserve basis and valuation method applicable to each policy series (or in the case of group annuity contracts, to annuities purchased under those contracts in a given year or years); and the applicability of any aggregate test of reserve adequacy prescribed in the state's valuation law. Other examples of prescribed valuation procedures to be considered are requirements that reserves may not be less than the corresponding cash surrender values, and that appropriate reserve recognition of any premium deficiencies must be made.

7. It is important to note that the actuary is expressing an opinion on the adequacy in the aggregate of all the enumerated reserves and that possible deficiencies for individual components of the total reserves may be offset by margins in other items. In most circumstances the actuary may be able, by examination of the interest, mortality and morbidity assumptions and the company's prior experience under those assumptions, to form an opinion as to whether the conservative intent of the statutory provision has been met in the selection of valuation assumptions. In those instances wherein there is evidence that because of company experience or practices, inappropriate or inadequate statutory reserve standards, or extraordinary external events occurring prior to the Statement date, the statutory reserves might not make good and sufficient provision for unmatured obligations, then the actuary should make further tests (possibly by a gross premium valuation as described in general terms below) before expressing an opinion as to such policy reserves and other actuarial items.

A gross premium valuation may be made for an entire line of business or a major block of business. The results of such a gross premium valuation for a line or block of business are considered satisfactory for this purpose if the current reserve on the reserve basis being tested provides an appropriate margin over the excess of:

a) the then present value of future benefits and anticipated expenses,

b) the then present value of future guaranteed gross premiums using interest, mortality, morbidity, lapse, expense and any other appropriate assumptions selected as of the valuation date reflecting actual and anticipated experience. Provision for the expense of administration of non-premium paying policies should be made. Model office, sampling and other approximation techniques are appropriate if the actuary is satisfied that the results are indicative for the line or block of business being tested.

With respect to both the claim liabilities in Exhibit 11, Part 1, and the net deferred and uncollected premium amount, it is incumbent upon the actuary to pay particular attention to such factors as payment patterns, the mix of business by plan (especially health plans) and accounting cut-off dates.

8. If there is any change in the actuarial assumptions or methods from those previously employed, that change should be mentioned in the actuarial statement. The adoption for new issues of an actuarial assumption or method which differs from a corresponding assumption or method for prior issues is not a change in actuarial assumptions or methods within the meaning of this paragraph. Similarly, where the determination of reserves or claim liabilities is based on the periodic updating of experience data, such periodic updating is not a change in actuarial assumptions or methods within the meaning of this paragraph; examples could include reserves or claim liabilities for recently incurred claims (e.g., within two years or less) under disability and accident and health benefits.

9. A statement that provision has been made for all actuarial items which ought to be established is an affirmation by the actuary that he or she was thorough in his or her consideration of the first five points enumerated in paragraph 2, and that recommendations as to these items have been carried out to his or her satisfaction.

10. The statement of actuarial opinion should include (1) a paragraph giving the actuary's name and relationship with the company; (2) a scope paragraph identifying the subjects on which an opinion is to be expressed and describing the scope of the actuary's work; and (3) an opinion paragraph expressing his or her opinion with regard to such subjects. One or more additional paragraphs may be needed in individual cases if the actuary considers it necessary to state a qualification of his or her opinion or to explain some aspect of the Annual Statement which is not already sufficiently explained in the Annual Statement.

INTERPRETATION 7-A: RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE ACTUARY AND OTHERS

(Published December, 1975 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. An actuary stating an actuarial opinion in a Statutory Annual Statement is expressing a personal opinion for which the actuary takes full responsibility, except to the extent to which the opinion indicates reliance on other opinions. However, the actuary will ordinarily make use of other personnel to carry out assignments relative to the matters which the opinion covers. The actuary should not ordinarily indicate, in the opinion, reliance on such other persons.

2. The Instructions include wording appropriate for use in the case where the actuary relies on an accounting firm for the accuracy of the inforce inventory. That wording is appropriate for use where the accounting firm maintains the company inforce inventory. However, the actuary should not indicate reliance on an accounting firm that acts solely as an auditor of the inforce inventory, since it is the intent of the Instructions that the actuary indicate reliance, if at all, on the person or firm directly responsible for maintaining the inforce.

3. Most life insurance companies have an organizational structure in which the pertinent financial reporting responsibility is held by a single actuary or chief actuary who has knowledge of the actuarial items pertaining to all lines of the company's business. In that case the one actuary should sign the opinion as called for by the Instructions. However, in a life insurance company where no one actuary has sufficient knowledge of the actuarial items to enable him to render a single opinion for the business of the entire company (as, for example, may occur in a company where financial reporting responsibility for various product lines is divided among two or more actuaries), the actuaries should consider how best to comply with the Instructions requiring the "statement of a qualified actuary . . . . ." The question should also be considered where a company actuary is responsible for some actuarial statement items and an outside actuarial consultant is responsible for others.

In those circumstances where more than one actuary is to sign a statement of opinion, the following approaches appear to the Committee to be in accordance with the intent of the Instructions and satisfactory from a professional standpoint:

a) One actuary could state an opinion as to all the actuarial items, and indicate reliance on another actuary's statement of opinion, also included on the same page of the Statement, as to that portion of the actuarial items for which the second actuary, rather than the first, takes responsibility.

b) Each actuary could sign the statement of opinion with respect to the portion of the actuarial items for which that actuary takes responsibility. The opening paragraph, scope paragraph and opinion paragraph should properly identify the actuaries who are rendering the statement of opinion. The statement should clearly identify the separate amounts of the listed actuarial items on which each actuary is expressing an opinion. Below each actuary's signature there should be added such words as "with respect to (line of business—Life, Group, Health, Annuity, etc., as appropriate) actuarial items."

INTERPRETATION 7-B: ADEQUACY OF RESERVES

(Revised June, 1978 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. The actuarial opinion deals with policy and contract liabilities and other actuarial items. Although the valuation bases of invested assets, and their yield, are matters to be considered in adopting reserve valuation assumptions, the statement requirement does not call upon the actuary to express an opinion with regard to the general assets of the company. The NAIC spells out the valuation bases for assets in some considerable detail, and it is expected that the actuary can rely on the company's valuation of assets in accordance with those procedures, and the resulting yield in determining valuation interest assumptions.

2. In forming an opinion as to whether reserves "make a good and sufficient provision for all unmatured obligations of the company . . .", the actuary should evaluate the actuarial assumptions used by comparison with plausible sets of adverse circumstances and in relation to the time periods over which such circumstances can plausibly be expected to prevail. To hold reserves so great that a company could withstand any conceivable circumstances, no matter how adverse, would imply an excessive level of pricing of the insurance product, and good actuarial practice does not encompass such a degree of conservatism.

3. The comments on gross premium valuation in the seventh paragraph of Recommendation 7 refer to "an appropriate margin" over the gross premium reserves. Appropriateness of the margin should be judged in the manner described in paragraph 2 above. That gross premium valuation is a test for solvency under assumptions based on actual and anticipated experience. Therefore, the following factors should be considered:

   a) trends in the company's unit expense rates, including but not limited to the impact of inflation and of changes in productivity of company staff and equipment upon such expense rates;

   b) consistency between the trends in annual statement portfolio yield rates and the inflation assumption used for unit expense rates; and

   c) the extent to which policy dividends may be reduced in the future, if solvency is in question.

INTERPRETATION 7-C: QUALIFICATION OF ACTUARY'S STATEMENT OF OPINION

(Published December, 1975 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. The Instructions to the NAIC Life and Accident and Health Blank as adopted at the June 1975 meeting of the NAIC Blanks Subcommittee require the actuary to state an opinion, if formed, whether unqualified or not. If the opinion is qualified or adverse, the reason(s) for that opinion should be explicitly stated.

2. The following is an example, for illustrative purposes, of language which might be included in an actuary's qualified statement of opinion in a Statutory Statement. The language should indicate the actuary's estimate of the amount of reserve inadequacy, and should follow the scope paragraph and precede the opinion paragraph:

   > The company holds aggregate life insurance, annuity and accident and health insurance reserves of $_____. Although this amount meets the statutory requirements of the state of_____, it does not appear adequate in the light of the company's expetience. Tests indicate this amount would have to be increased to approximately $_____ to make a good and sufficient provision for the unmatured obligations under the company's policies and contracts.

   (When appropriate the actuary may identify specific reserve items which are inadequate.)

   The opinion paragraph should then begin:

   > In my opinion, except for the matter referred to in the preceding paragraph, the amounts carried in the balance sheet on account of the actuarial items identified above

(i) ...

(a listing of the items of the statement of opinion)

The illustrative language should be modified as needed to meet the circumstances of a particular case, and the actuary should, in all events, use language which clearly expresses the actuary's professional judgment.

3. If the inadequacy exceeds Statement surplus, the qualifying paragraph should so state.

RECOMMENDATION 8: STATEMENT OF ACTUARIAL OPINION FOR FIRE AND CASUALTY INSURANCE COMPANY STATUTORY ANNUAL STATEMENTS

(Published November, 1978 by the Committee on Fire and Casualty Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Recommendation delineates the responsibility of the actuary in signing a statement of actuarial opinion. Such opinion relates to the loss and loss expense reserves and other actuarial items contained in an Annual Statement of a Fire and Casualty Insurance Company to a state regulatory authority, i.e., the "Statutory Statement".

2. The Statement of Actuarial Opinion should list the items and amounts on which the actuary expresses an opinion.

3. The Statement of Actuarial Opinion will express the opinion of the actuary as to whether the stated reserves:

   (i) are computed in accordance with commonly accepted actuarial methods and are fairly stated in accordance with sound actuarial principles,

   (ii) are based on actuarial factors which are relevant to policy provisions,

   (iii) meet the requirements of the insurance laws of (state of domicile),

   (iv) make a good and sufficient provision for all unpaid obligations,

   (v) are computed on the basis of similar general methods as used in the preceding year. If a change in methods is relevant to a change in the current reserve level, an explanation should follow.

Paragraphs 4 through 7 comment on these responsibilities.

aries, the Proceedings and other publications of the Casualty Actuarial Society, the Proceedings of the Conference of Actuaries in Public Practice, recognized actuarial textbooks and regulations of State Insurance Departments. In particular, the Casualty Actuarial Society's statement of principles regarding property and casualty loss and loss adjustment expense liabilities and the references cited therein should be reviewed by the actuary. The actuary's judgment in developing the standards for the actuarial computation must take into account the specific characteristics of the contracts with respect to which the actuary is expressing an opinion.

5. The actuary should review the statutory reserve requirements of the state of domicile of the company on whose reserves he or she is expressing an opinion. In those instances wherein there is some question that because of company experience or practices, inappropriate or inadequate statutory reserve standards, or extraordinary external events occurring prior to the statement date, the statutory reserves might not make good and sufficient provision for unpaid obligations, the actuary should make further tests before expressing an opinion as to such reserves and other actuarial items. It is important to note that the actuary is expressing an opinion of the adequacy of the aggregate reserves and that possible deficiencies for individual components may be offset by margins in other items.

6. If there is any material change in the actuarial assumptions or methods from those previously employed, that change should be mentioned in the actuarial statement. Where the determination of claim liabilities is based on the periodic updating of experience data, such periodic updating is not a change in actuarial assumptions or methods within the meaning of this paragraph.

7. The statement of actuarial opinion should include (1) a paragraph identifying the actuary and indicating his or her relationship with the company; (2) a scope paragraph identifying the subjects on which an opinion is to be expressed and describing the scope of the actuary's work; and (3) an opinion paragraph expressing his or her opinion with regard to such subjects. One or more additional paragraphs may be needed in individual cases if the actuary considers it necessary to state a qualification of his or her opinion or to explain some aspect of the annual statement which is not already sufficiently explained in the annual statement.

INTERPRETATION 8-A: RESPONSIBILITIES OF THE ACTUARY AND OTHERS

(Published November, 1978 by the Committee on Fire and Casualty Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. In furnishing a Statement of Actuarial Opinion, the actuary is expressing a personal opinion for which the actuary takes full responsibility, except to the extent to which the opinion indicates reliance on other opinions. However, the actuary will ordinarily make use of other personnel to carry out assignments relative to the matters which the opinion covers. The actuary should not ordinarily indicate, in the opinion, reliance on other persons, in such circumstances.

2. Most Fire and Casualty Insurance Companies have an organizational structure in which the pertinent financial reporting responsibility is held by a single actuary or chief actuary who has knowledge of the actuarial items pertaining to all lines of the company's business. In that case, the one actuary should sign the opinion. However, in a Fire and Casualty Insurance Company where no one actuary has sufficient knowledge of the actuarial items to enable one of them to render a single opinion for the business of the entire company (as, for example, may occur in a company where financial responsibility for various product lines is divided among two or more actuaries), the actuaries should consider how best to communicate their respective responsibilities. The question should also be considered where a consulting actuary is responsible for the work of others.

   In those circumstances where more than one actuary is to sign a statement of opinion, the following approaches appear to the Committee to be in accordance with the intent of Recommendation 8 and satisfactory from a professional standpoint:

   a) One actuary could state an opinion as to all the actuarial items, and indicate reliance on another actuary's statement of opinion, also included on the same page of the Statement, as to that portion of the actuarial items for which the second actuary, rather than the first, takes responsibility.

   b) Each actuary could sign the statement of opinion with respect to the portion of the actuarial items for which that actuary takes responsibility. The opening paragraph, scope paragraph and opinion paragraph should properly identify the actuaries who are rendering the statement of opinion. The statement could clearly identify the separate amounts of the listed actuarial items on which each actuary is expressing an opinion.

INTERPRETATION 8-B: ADEQUACY OF RESERVES

(Published November, 1978 by the Committee on Fire and Casualty Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. The Statement of Actuarial Opinion deals with loss and loss expense reserves. Other liabilities may be included in the actuarial opinion. It does not call upon the actuary to express an opinion with regard to the general assets of the company.

2. In forming an opinion as to whether reserves "make a good and sufficient provision for all unpaid obligations represented by the stated reserves . . .", the actuary should evaluate the actuarial judgments used giving recognition to other factors as well as the time periods over which the liabilities will extend. To hold reserves so great that a company could withstand any conceivable circumstances, no matter how adverse, would be excessive and good actuarial practice does not encompass such a degree of conservatism.

INTERPRETATION 8-C: QUALIFICATION OF ACTUARY'S STATEMENT OF OPINION

(Published November, 1978 by the Committee on Fire and Casualty Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. The Actuarial Statement of Opinion requires the actuary to state whether an opinion is qualified in any respect. If so, the reason(s) for that qualification should be set forth.

2. If the actuary does not take responsibility for the work of others on which the actuary has relied, the Statement of Actuarial Opinion should define the work of others and the extent to which such others' work forms the basis for the Opinion.

3. If the inadequacy exceeds Annual Statement surplus, the Statement of Actuarial Opinion should so state.

RECOMMENDATION 9: MATERIALITY

(Published June, 1978 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. This Recommendation, sponsored by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles, discuss the application of the concept of materiality to actuarial aspects of the financial reporting of life insurance companies.

   The concept of materiality is frequently referred to in actuarial practice and literature. For example, Opinion A-6, ACTUARIAL PRINCIPLES AND PRACTICES IN CONNECTION WITH FINANCIAL REPORTING OF LIFE INSURANCE COMPANIES IN THE UNITED STATES, states in paragraph 6 that "approximations and approximate methods may be used, provided that the actuary has satisfied himself that the result does not differ materially from the result of using more precise methods." As another example, the paper "Analysis of Approximate Valuation Methods" by E. Allen Arnold in Volume VII of the Transactions of the Society of Actuaries deals theoretically with methods for approximation.

2. An actuary is expected to pay scrupulous attention to professional standards in the selection of actuarial assumptions and methods, and in the disclosure of significant information to those whose actions may be influenced by his actuarial opinions or findings. An actuary, however, may find that the improvement in accuracy or in understanding which may result from the application of theoretically ideal formulas and methods in complete detail, without regard to considerations of timing and expense, by comparison with the use of an approximation or other shortcut procedures, or the omission of a specific disclosure, is so slight as not to justify the expenditure of the additional time and money needed. Under the concept of materiality, it is appropriate for the actuary to employ such approximate methods and procedures when the effect would be immaterial—that is, of little significance to a potential user of the actuary's work. It is also generally not necessary to utilize methods or procedures which imply a degree of precision that is in fact unattainable due to the level of uncertainty which may be contained in the actuarial assumptions employed.

3. Determining whether an item is material or not is a difficult professional judgment. In making that judgment, the actuary should consider the decision-making framework of the typical user of the actuary's work, and his probable response. The judgment involves quantitative as well as qualitative consideration. Although Interpretations of this Recommendation attempt to provide guidance to the actuary in making decisions as to each of these elements of the materiality judgment, they do not constitute a precise definition of materiality.

4. Accountants, in their audit review of financial statements, are governed by generally accepted accounting principles and auditing standards, which involve application of a similar concept of materiality. The actuary and the auditor should be expected to make their respective decisions as to materiality in the light of their judgment of users' needs, as influenced by the concepts and standards of their respective professions.

INTERPRETATION 9-A: MATERIALITY, TYPICAL USERS

(Published June, 1978 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. Opinion A-3: Transmittal of Actuarial Reports of the American Academy of Actuaries describes general guides for an actuary in determining who his "client" is when the actuary is acting in various roles. When the actuary determines materiality he must further take into account who will be the expected final user of his work.

2. In the case of a GAAP statement for a stock life insurance company, the actuary should consider the stockholder or potential stockholder as the primary user.

3. In the case of a statutory financial statement the actuary may consider the primary users to be the policyholder and the insurance regulator, without implying that other parties do not have an interest in the financial condition of the company.

4. Since an insurance company's financial statement may be used for the purpose of borrowing funds, the actuary should consider the creditor's point of view.

5. The actuary should also be aware of the criteria employed by other interested parties, such as the independent auditor.

INTERPRETATION 9-B: MATERIALITY, QUANTITATIVE CONSIDERATIONS

(Published June, 1978 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. The following paragraphs comment briefly on quantitative concepts that the actuary may find useful in making his judgments as to materiality. In no case should the actuary regard quantitative tests as conclusive, but he may use them as a corroborating supplement to his judgment. Any quantitative judgment should be regarded, at most, as raising a presumption which may be rebutted, in the actuary's judgment, by particular circumstances in the case.

2. The primary criteria for materiality applied by an actuary for a GAAP statement of a stock insurance company should be related to the earnings of the company, both in absolute amounts and in terms of trend. In the case of statutory statements, emphasis should be placed on the level of surplus.

3. The magnitude of financial effect of a matter should be viewed in terms of both absolute and relative amounts. For instance, when earnings or surplus are of significant absolute dollar amount, the materiality judgment should generally be related to percentage change. However, the percentage change consideration may not be appropriate when a small dollar amount of earnings or surplus serves as the criterion. When the dollar amount of change is very large, materiality may be implied for this reason alone.

4. The actuary must decide on the materiality of items for which he is responsible. In making such judgments, the actuary should also consider whether the cumulative effect or the net effect of a number of items (including items which may be the responsibility of other actuaries or of accountants) may be material even though each item individually may be immaterial. As examples of such judgments, with no implication that this Interpretation should be limited to such examples, materiality would influence the actuary's judgment in the following cases:

   A. In considering disclosure of the effect of any inconsistency in the timing of premium recognition as between gross and valuation premiums, the actuary need not disclose an immaterial difference;

   B. Reinsurance adjustments for Yearly Renewable Term contracts may be omitted or approximated if such adjustments are not material;

C. A change in an actuarial assumption between reporting periods need not be disclosed if the effect of such change is not material;

D. The statutory value of a reserve item may be used to represent its value in a statement prepared under Generally Accepted Accounting Principles (GAAP) if the effect of the substitution is not material.

INTERPRETATION 9-C: MATERIALITY, QUALITATIVE CONSIDERATIONS

(Published June, 1978 by the Committee on Life Insurance Financial Reporting Principles)

1. A stricter test for materiality should be applied to those items which will have a continuing and pervasive effect on future statements of the insurance company than to unusual and non-repetitive items.

2. In making a materiality judgment, the actuary should consider the cost of developing precise information, relative to the benefits to users of that information. Disclosure may be indicated if approximations of significant items are made for cost considerations.

3. The actuary must make his judgment regarding materiality on the basis of information available at the time the judgment is made. It is manifestly improper to pass on materiality in the light of subsequent events, i.e., on a "hindsight" basis.

4. The actuary should consider including in the actuarial report a brief description of those circumstances where he made a close decision to treat an item or an aggregate or net of a number of items as not material.

Recommendations of the Committee on Pension Actuarial Principles and Practices are published in accordance with procedures prescribed by the Board of Directors.

Opinion A-4 of "Opinions as to Professional Conduct" further requires that > ". . . . the actuary take into consideration the published Recommendations of the Academy's Committee on Pension Actuarial Principles and Practices. An actuary who uses principles or practices which deviate materially from such Recommendations must be prepared to support his particular use of such principles or practices and should include in his report appropriate and explicit information with respect to such deviation.

The Committee recognizes the need for professional judgment based on individual circumstances. Accordingly, Recommendations are limited, to the extent feasible consistent with their objectives, to basic statements.

A. CALCULATION OF ACTUARIAL PRESENT VALUES UNDER PENSION PLANS

SECTION 1. GENERAL

1.1 Opinion A-4 describes the basic responsibilities of the actuary in the application of actuarial principles and practices under pension plans. This Recommendation sets forth generally accepted principles and practices with respect to the calculation of actuarial present values under pension plans, other than social insurance programs. This Recommendation is not intended to encompass the calculation of insurance company statutory reserves.

1.2 The great growth of American pension plans has occurred since the Second World War. During this period actuarial procedures and techniques have been in a continual state of development. As a result, this Recommendation is intended to be applicable on a prospective basis only.

1.3 Pension plans covered by this Recommendation are those which provide benefits on retirement, and which may also provide benefits on death, disability, or termination of employment. Such a plan may be:

(a) a single employer program

(b) a multiemployer program

(c) a governmental program (other than a social insurance program)

(d) a program sponsored by a labor union or a trade, fraternal or other association.

1.4 The Plan may be financed through the medium of:

(a) a trust fund with individual trustees

(b) a trust fund with one or more corporate trustees

(c) one or more insurance company contracts

(d) a split-funded arrangement, using insurance contracts and other funds

(e) a pay-as-you-go arrangement without an intermediary funding medium, possibly with reserves accumulated on the books of the sponsor or sponsors.

1.5 Calculations of actuarial present values are not generally required with respect to benefits provided under:

(a) profit-sharing, savings or money purchase plans; or

(b) insurance contracts to the extent such benefits have been fully purchased and guaranteed by payment of the appropriate premiums.

However, if an actuarial present value of such benefits is to be prepared, the actuary should proceed in accordance with this Recommendation.

1.6 RECOMMENDATION A(1): If an actuary uses procedures which deviate materially from those prescribed in the Recommendations set forth below, he should be prepared to support his particular use of such procedures and should include in his report an appropriate and explicit statement with respect to the nature, rationale and effect of such deviations.

SECTION 2. DEFINITION OF ACTUARIAL PRESENT VALUE

2.1 An actuarial present value is the value as of a specified date of an amount or series of amounts payable or receivable thereafter, where each amount is:

(a) adjusted for the probable effect of intervening events (such as changes in compensation levels, Social Security, marital status, etc.),

(b) multiplied by the probability of the occurrence of the event (such as survival, death, disability, termination of employment, etc.) on which the payment is conditioned, and

2.2 Actuarial present value calculations are made not only to determine the present value of future benefit payments under a pension plan, but also for the purpose of computing prospective costs or contributions to a pension plan funded under one of the actuarial cost methods described in Section 4. Depending upon the actuarial cost method, the calculation of prospective costs or contributions may require calculation of one or more of the following:

(a) present value of total projected benefits

(b) present value of accrued benefits

(c) present value of future normal costs

(d) present value of future contributions of plan participants

(e) present value of future compensation of plan participants

(f) present value of uniform amounts per life payable over future years of participation.

2.3 Actuarial present values also encompass the calculation of a quantity variously referred to as "accrued liability," "part service liability," and "supplemental liability". In this Recommendation the term "supplemental present value" is used to describe this quantity. In some actuarial cost methods, "supplemental present value" is not a direct present value of specific benefits, but instead is an amount derived from other present values (e.g., an amount equal to the excess of the present value of total projected benefits over the present value of future normal costs).

SECTION 3. PURPOSES OF ACTUARIAL PRESENT VALUES

3.1 The purposes for which actuarial present values are computed generally fall into three broad categories.

(a) Calculations for purposes of determining actuarial cost and benefit recommendations, and related information. Examples are calculations related to:

(i) recommendations as to the estimated cost for defined benefit plans

(ii) recommendations as to the type and level of benefits for defined contribution plans

(iii) contributions required under minimum funding standards imposed by statute or regulations

(iv) maximum contributions deductible for Federal income tax purposes

(v) information required for the sponsor's financial statements

(vi) information required with respect to plan design

(vii) progress towards a desired funding goal.

(b) Calculations for purposes of determining the adequacy of available assets held for benefits specified by the plan. Examples are calculations related to:

(i) present value of accrued benefits

(ii) present value of nonforfeitable (vested) benefits

(iii) experience surplus or deficiency

(iv) present value of benefits payable in the event of plan termination

(v) information required with respect to plan mergers, acquisitions and spin-offs

(vi) expected future benefits or dividend return from fully purchased insurance or annuity contracts.

(c) Calculations for purposes of determining alternative forms of benefit payments, on an actuarial equivalent basis. Examples are calculations related to:

(i) postretirement survivor options

(ii) preretirement survivor options

(iii) period certain options

(iv) lump sum settlements

(v) Social Security adjustment options

(vi) early retirement benefits

(vii) postponed retirement benefits.

SECTION 4. CALCULATION OF ACTUARIAL PRESENT VALUES TO DETERMINE COST AND BENEFIT RECOMMENDATIONS

4.1 The actuarial terminology for pension plans has been developed in a relatively uncontrolled environment. Notwithstanding several attempts to standardize and clarify pension actuarial nomenclature, some of the more commonly used terms are poorly defined or misleading. This is particularly so with respect to the names given to actuarial cost methods. In an attempt to solve this problem, the Committee on Pensions of the Society of Actuaries is developing recommended terminology. Upon completion of this task, the list of acceptable actuarial cost methods given in the next paragraph will be amended to conform with the recommendations of that Committee.

Actuarial Cost Methods

4.2 Calculations prepared for purposes of determining cost recommendations under fixed benefit plans or benefits under fixed contribution plans require the calculation of present values of prospective costs to plan sponsors and/or participants and are thus directly related to the actuarial cost method employed. Actuarial cost methods generally fall into two broad categories:

(a) Projected benefit method

(i) individual level cost

(A) entry age normal cost with supplemental present value

(B) attained age normal cost with supplemental present value

(C) level cost without supplemental present value

(ii) aggregate level cost

(A) entry age normal cost with supplemental present value

(B) attained age normal cost with supplemental present value

(C) level cost without supplemental present value

(b) Accrued benefit method

(i) unit benefit cost

(A) one year current cost with supplemental present value.

An appropriate variation of these methods is "the frozen initial cost method" under which the supplemental present value is the sum of the

4.3 Actuarial cost methods have, in the past, generally been applied to the existing population of plan participants without (closed group method) or with allowance for replacement of terminated employees, but not generally with allowance for changes in the size and structure of the workforce. However, actuarial cost methods based upon projections of the existing workforce (open group method) adjusted for expected future changes in the nature of the workforce are also recognized and accepted.

4.4 The accrued benefit method has, in the past, generally been based upon units of benefits accrued to the calculation date using historical records. The accrued benefit method as applied by first projecting retirement benefits to expected retirement on the basis of relevant actuarial assumptions is also recognized and accepted. The present value of benefits accrued to date, and the current cost, are then based upon appropriate prorated portions of the total present value of the projected benefit, with such proration based upon service or, if appropriate, compensation. To determine the total projected benefit at retirement, actuarial assumptions should be made, as applicable, with respect to salary scale, prospective entitlement to early retirement benefits in excess of those having actuarial values equivalent to the accrued normal retirement benefits, projection of Social Security benefits and taxable earnings, etc. As used in this latter context, the accrued benefit method has some of the attributes of a projected benefit method.

4.5 RECOMMENDATION A(2): All of the above listed actuarial cost methods are generally acceptable. The accrued benefit method is acceptable with respect to a "final salary" plan (one whose benefit formula is related to compensation in the years immediately preceding retirement or other termination) only if the actuary calculates the normal cost as the appropriate pro rata portion of benefits projected to expected retirement or other future termination date.

4.6 In conjunction with any of the above actuarial cost methods, it may be considered appropriate to determine the current annual cost of ancillary benefits (such as disability and preretirement death benefits) by applying the one-year term cost method, provided that the developing annual cost for such ancillary benefits is expected to remain relatively stable, or the cost exposure is relatively minor in relation to the cost of the entire plan.

4.7 Other actuarial cost methods are in use, and new methods and techniques are continually being developed.

4.8 RECOMMENDATION A(3): The development of new methods and techniques is encouraged. However, until such other methods and techniques become generally acceptable actuarial procedures, an actuary using an alternative actuarial cost method should be prepared to support his method or technique and should include in his report appropriate and explicit information with respect to the distinguishing nature of the alternative cost method and the difference in effect, if material, of such method from the results under one of the methods set forth above.

4.9 RECOMMENDATION A(4): The extent to which benefits of a plan should be funded in advance of the date when they must be paid is a decision to be made by the plan sponsor, with the assistance of the actuary, in light of many factors, including regulatory requirements, collective bargaining considerations, financial practices, accounting considerations and alternative uses of money. If the funding pattern differs from the long-term pattern consistent with the Recommendations set forth herein, the actuary should disclose the trend of the funding pattern, and should indicate, at least approximately, the expected impact of such funding pattern on future pension costs.

SECTION 5. CALCULATION OF ACTUARIAL PRESENT VALUES TO DETERMINE ADEQUACY OF AVAILABLE ASSETS

5.1 The actuary should be prepared to indicate the status of the funding of a plan. Normally, this may be done by comparing the plan's assets as of a given date, as defined by the asset valuation method chosen by the actuary, with the actuarial present values of the benefits under the plan, calculated in accordance with the actuarial cost method used for determining pension cost or benefit recommendations.

5.2 The actuary may be required to calculate actuarial present values of accrued benefits, where such calculations are supplemental to, and independent of, calculations made under the actuarial cost method used for determining pension cost or benefit recommendations. Such supplemental calculations of actuarial present values would normally fall into three broad categories as set forth in the rest of this Section.

5.3 Present Value of Benefits Payable Upon Plan Termination

RECOMMENDATION A(5): Where calculations are required to determine the actuarial present value of benefits payable in the event of a plan termination, the actuary should calculate the actuarial present value of benefits payable for each ordered class of employees in accordance with termination priorities specified in the plan. He should first determine the plan benefits for each covered employee on the basis of his history of pay, service, and other appropriate factors, as if the plan were terminating as of the calculation date. He should then calculate the present value of such benefits by applying actuarial assumptions appropriate to a plan in the process of termination, such assumptions generally being limited to mortality, investment return and expense charges.

5.4 Present Value of "Vested" Benefits

RECOMMENDATION A(6): Where calculations are required in the case of an active plan to determine the actuarial present value of "vested" benefits, as for example under APB Opinion No. 8, the actuary should calculate, in accordance with the provisions of the plan, the accrued benefit for each covered employee based upon his history of pay, service, and other appropriate factors as of the calculation date. This benefit should then be multiplied by the vesting percentage defined under the plan, based upon his age and service as of the calculation date.

5.5 The actuary should then calculate the present value of such benefits by applying factors based on actuarial assumptions applicable to an active plan situation, such assumptions to include the timing of expected commencement of benefits, mortality, investment return, etc., and to be consistent with the plan's actuarial asset valuation method. The calculation should be made in accordance with the following procedures to the extent they are applicable:

(a) No recognition should be given to any benefit to which a covered employee could, only through advancement in age or service while in active employment, become entitled.

(b) Cost-of-living or other benefit increases specified by the plan and assumed to occur after retirement, death or other termination should be recognized.

(c) There should be no projection of Social Security benefits or Social Security covered earnings, other than that specified by the plan for the purpose of determining the benefit of a covered employee who retires or terminates service on the calculation date.

5.6 Actuaries should, of course, be prepared to isolate the present value of "vested" benefits subject to the termination insurance provisions of The Employee Retirement Income Security Act of 1974.

5.7 Present Value of Accrued Benefits Under an Active Plan

It is recognized that actuaries have varying opinions as to the best measure of the present value of accrued benefits under an active plan.

5.8 Under many pension plans, benefits accrued to the calculation date are directly computed on the basis of historical employee records. In such cases the most common procedure currently in use is to calculate the present value of accrued benefits on the basis of such directly computed accrued benefits.

5.9 A substantial number of pension plans, however, contain features such that an actuary may wish to employ an alternative calculation. Examples of such plans are:

(a) plans with maximum credited service provisions

(b) plans with Social Security offset provisions where credited service used to compute such offsets is limited to a shorter period of credited service than that used to compute the gross pension benefit

(c) plans providing early retirement benefits with an actuarial value greater than the value of the accrued benefit to which the participant would be entitled commencing at normal retirement date

(d) plans with automatic cost-of-living increases

(e) contributory plans under which the plan's accrued benefit may have a value less than that of accumulated employee contributions.

5.10 RECOMMENDATION A(7): The procedure used to determine the present value of accrued benefits under an active plan should reflect the actuary's best judgment as to the most meaningful figure for such actuarial present value in light of the purposes for which the calculation is to be used. In presenting his results, the actuary's report should clearly indicate the treatment afforded to the following:

(a) the manner in which benefits are calculated in the case of a plan which limits the number of years that may be credited

(b) whether a projection of future earnings was applied in calculating benefits accrued to the calculation date

(c) whether recognition was given to any benefits which, if an employee continued in employment, could become payable before normal retirement age with an actuarial value greater than the value of the accrued normal retirement benefit

(d) whether benefit increases scheduled to occur after retirement were recognized

(e) whether Social Security benefits, under an integrated offset plan, were reflected in full or prorated

(f) where average Social Security covered earnings, if applicable under an integrated step-up plan, were related to past service only, or projected to normal retirement

(g) whether the actuarial assumptions used for this purpose were different from the assumptions used to determine total pension plan costs or contributions; if they were, the report should indicate the reasons therefor and the effect thereof.

SECTION 6. ACTUARIAL ASSUMPTIONS

6.1 The selection of actuarial assumptions is a critical factor in the development of actuarial present values, but it is not within the scope of this Recommendation to discuss, in depth, the selection of individual actuarial assumptions.

6.2 Identification of Actuarial Assumptions

In preparing present value calculations in accordance with this Recommendation, the actuary should consider the applicability of actuarial assumptions to such items as:

(a) normal retirement
(b) early retirement
(c) deferred retirement
(d) salary scale
(e) mortality
(f) disability and disability recovery
(g) voluntary termination
(h) involuntary termination
(i) family composition
(j) marriage, remarriage and divorce
(k) investment return
(l) Social Security benefits and taxable wage base
(m) administrative expense
(n) new entrants
(o) election of optional forms of benefit.

6.3 Selection of Actuarial Assumptions

RECOMMENDATION A(8): The actuarial assumptions selected should reflect the actuary's best judgment of future events affecting the related actuarial present value. They should take into account the actual experience of the covered group to the extent information is available and applicable, but in recognition of the nature of a pension plan, they should also reflect expected long-term future trends rather than give undue weight to recent past experience.

6.4 The actuary should consider the impact of inflation and the method of valuing assets in selecting the actuarial assumptions to be used.

6.5 The actuary should give consideration to the reasonableness of each actuarial assumption independently on the basis of its own merits and to the combined impact of all the assumptions.

6.6 The actuary should give careful attention to changes in plan design which may significantly alter the level and trend of expected future experience. For example, a liberalization of early retirement benefits may make advisable a revision in the retirement assumptions.

6.7 The actuary, in choosing assumptions appropriate to the calculation of an actuarial present value, should take into account, to the extent he deems suitable, general or specific information available from other sources, including the plan sponsor, plan administrator, investment managers, accountants, economists, etc. As a result of these considerations, the actuary may develop actuarial assumptions which differ from plan to plan, and the Committee recognizes that such differences may exist.

6.8 The actuary may find it desirable to assume a conservative posture in selecting actuarial assumptions in conjunction with the actuarial cost method employed, bearing in mind the degree of uncertainty in assumptions and the potential for adverse fluctuation.

SECTION 7. DATA EMPLOYED

7.1 RECOMMENDATION A(9): The actuary preparing a present value calculation in accordance with these Recommendations should make a clear statement as to the source and adequacy of the employee data used as a basis for the calculation.

7.2 He should indicate the extent to which the calculation is based on incomplete or unreported data, the probable effect on the accuracy of the calculation, and the adjustment made in the actuarial present values to correct for such incomplete or unreported data.

7.3 The actuary should satisfy himself as to the internal consistency of the data and their comparability with data used in prior calculations.

SECTION 8. VALUATION OF ASSETS FOR ACTUARIAL PURPOSES

8.1 RECOMMENDATION A(10): If an actuarial present value is being compared with the value of available assets, the actuary should make a clear statement of the asset valuation method used. In choosing an asset valuation method he should give consideration to the appreciation (or depreciation) in the value of the assets so as to reflect, in a manner consistent with the investment return assumption used in the calculation of the related actuarial present value, the expected long-range growth of the plan's investments while eliminating the effect of short-term volatility.

8.2 The actuary should satisfy himself as to the applicability of the asset information used.

8.3 In any such actuarial calculation, current market value of assets, if not used directly for the comparison, should be reported as a footnote. It is recognized that in certain situations, such as plan termination, merger, spin-off, etc., the direct use of current market value may be desirable or required by statute or regulations.

8.4 If the actuarial present value is to be compared with the market value of the plan's current assets, and the plan's actuarial basis uses another method to measure such assets for actuarial purposes, the actuary should either:

(a) recognize any inconsistency between the investment return assumption used in the present value determination and the investment return assumption that would be consistent with the market value of the assets, or

(b) redetermine the present value using an investment return assumption consistent with the market value of the assets.

SECTION 9. APPROXIMATIONS

9.1 RECOMMENDATION A(11): Where it would be unreasonable to make a calculation of an actuarial present value in accordance with this Recommendation because of the cost of preparation or other significant factors (such as plans covering few participants), the actuary should use appropriate approximations consistent with the intent of this Recommendation.

SECTION 10. RELATIONSHIP WITH OTHER PROFESSIONS

10.1 The actuary must always maintain his sense of integrity and act as a professional in relation to those to whom he renders services, to plan participants, to his employer and fellow employees, to members of the actuarial and other professions, and to society at large.

10.2 The actuary is expected to rely on his own knowledge, training and experience. If questions are raised with respect to the appropriateness of actuarial cost methods and/or actuarial assumptions, he should be prepared to have such cost methods and/or assumptions reviewed by another actuary.

10.3 RECOMMENDATION A(12): In preparing calculations for the purposes of determining actuarial present values, the actuary should give adequate recognition to the responsibilities of other professions and to the requirements of clients in dealing with such other professions. He should, in accordance with Opinion A-3 of the Opinions as to Professional Conduct, furnish all actuarial information pertinent to such responsibilities and requirements. If questions are raised with respect to the appropriateness of actuarial cost methods or actuarial assumptions, the actuary should be prepared to have such cost methods or assumptions reviewed by another actuary.

B. RECOGNITION OF INFLATION IN THE CALCULATION OF ACTUARIAL PRESENT VALUES UNDER PENSION PLANS

SECTION 1. INTRODUCTION

1.1 This Recommendation supplements the Recommendation regarding the Calculation of Actuarial Present Values Under Pension Plans, as such calculations are affected by inflation.

1.2 The great growth of American pension plans has occurred since the Second World War. During most of those years inflation was not a major factor in the economy. For example, between 1948 and 1967, the Consumer Price Index increased at an average annual rate of less than 2.00%. Also, over those years pension funds were investing an increasing proportion of their assets in common stocks, and were achieving a rate of return that substantially exceeded the rate of inflation. However, beginning in the late 1960's this relationship changed dramatically, as shown by the following table:

	Equivalent Annual Rate of Growth
Calendar Years	Consumer Price Index	S&P 500 Stock Index*
1921-25	—1.53	12.84
1926-30	—2.10	9.38
1931-35	—3.04	2.08
1936-40	0.38	1.60
1941-45	5.25	17.36
1946-50	6.57	9.88
1951-55	1.43	23.93
1956-60	2.12	8.93
1961-65	1.33	13.27
1966-70	4.54	3.33
1971-75	6.91	3.25
1921-1975	1.93	9.42

*With reinvestment of dividends

The experience of these years illustrates the profound impact of inflation on pension plans, as well as the difficulty of dealing with this subject.

SECTION 2. SCOPE

2.1 The effects of possible future changes in pension plan provisions due to inflation are not encompassed by this Recommendation.

2.2 Certain types of pension plan benefit formulas react either poorly or not at all to rising wage levels. For example, flat dollar pensions or pensions based on career average earnings may become progressively less adequate under inflationary conditions unless benefit formulas are revised. If the benefits of a plan are not to be allowed to become inadequate, changes in these types of benefit formulas may be expected under inflationary conditions. In addition, retirement plans which have a history of providing ad hoc postretirement increases could be expected to continue postretirement increases during inflationary periods.

2.3 While the effects of possible future changes in pension plan provisions due to inflation are not encompassed by this Recommendation, the actuary should, nevertheless, be prepared, when requested, to anticipate such changes in developing long range expected cost patterns following the Recommendations set forth herein.

SECTION 3. DEFINITION OF INFLATION

3.1 Inflation is the economic condition of rising unit price levels, usually associated with increases in wage levels and high interest rates.

3.2 The relationships among prices, cost-of-living, wages and productivity are important in any consideration of the effects of inflation.

3.3 The effect of changing unit price levels on a particular individual or group is dependent on the mix of goods and services used by that individual or group. This concept is recognized in measuring cost-of-living changes by assuming a particular mix of goods and services to be representative of the group considered.

3.4 The most widely used measure of changes in the cost-of-living is the Consumer Price Index. A number of labor agreements and pension plans use the CPI to measure cost-of-living changes. The structure and limitations of the CPI should be understood by the actuary. The CPI measures the relative price changes in a given "market basket" of goods and services for a hypothetical urban area wage-earning family. Although adjustments for changes in the quality of consumer durable goods are occasionally made by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, the CPI does not provide a comprehensive measure of changes in the quality of the market basket's constituents. Substitutions of new goods and services to reflect life style changes are introduced at wide intervals, approximately once each decade. Furthermore, the CPI omits the effect of important types of expenditures, notably income taxes and Social Security taxes.

3.5 Wage levels are affected by inflation and changes in productivity. Productivity increases tend to produce or to make possible increased wages. Some portion of productivity gains, but generally not all, may be reflected in increases in wages without being inflationary. Conversely, a condition of wages increasing faster than an appropriate share of productivity gains results in pressure for price increases. All of these pressures on wage levels, which are often complex and difficult to measure, act within the framework of supply and demand for labor and within the legal-regulatory environment.

SECTION 4. THE EFFECT OF INFLATION ON ACTUARIAL ASSUMPTIONS

4.1 The expectation of rising prices, rising wages and higher interest rates affects the actuarial assumptions employed in calculating actuarial present values, recognizing the long-term nature of such assumptions. The actuarial assumptions directly affected by inflation include the following:

(1) Salary increases—Salaries increase as a result of merit raises, promotions in grade, and increases in wage levels because of improved productivity. In addition, the general level of salaries and wages will tend to increase with inflation.

(2) Investment return—The rate of investment return may be expected to be affected by inflation and other economic factors. Such factors may affect the various categories of investments in different directions and/or degrees.

(3) Social Security benefit and taxable wage base changes—The Social Security Act, as amended in 1972, provides for automatic adjustment of benefits based on changes in the Consumer Price Index. The taxable wage base is also adjusted as changes occur in average covered wages. Either or both of these factors will affect the benefits of pension plans integrated with Social Security.

(4) Direct benefit increases—Benefits under some pension plans are adjusted directly and automatically for inflationary effects. Included in this category are adjustments in retirement benefits related to changes in the Consumer Price Index or the average wages of plan members.

It is recognized that actuaries may have differing opinions as to the impact of a given expected rate of inflation upon each of the above actuarial assumptions.

4.2 The actuarial assumptions which may be indirectly affected by inflation include rates of disablement, termination of disabled status, employment termination, and retirement.

4.3 The effects of inflation may be recognized in actuarial assumptions either explicitly or implicitly.

(1) Explicit recognition of inflation means that each actuarial assumption is chosen as the actuary's estimate, with a suitable allowance for adverse fluctuations, of the plan's average long-term future experience with respect to that assumption, recognizing the expected rate of inflation, if any. Explicit recognition extends to each actuarial assumption having a material effect on actuarial present values. Thus, the investment return assumption represents the actuary's expectation of the future return on the pension fund's assets, and should be consistent with the method of valuation of assets for actuarial purposes. Similarly, assumptions as to future salaries, Social Security benefits, or Consumer Price Index levels individually represent the actuary's expectation for future changes in these factors related to the expected rate of inflation assumed.

(2) Implicit recognition of inflation in actuarial assumptions means that two or more material actuarial assumptions do not individually represent the actuary's expectation of average future experience, but that the aggregate effect of their combined use results in costs which currently are approximately the same as if explicit recognition had been given to inflation in each actuarial assumption. For example, the actuary might assume rates of investment return and salary increase which are each lower than he expects will actually be experienced.

4.4 Many actuaries have traditionally used the implicit approach. In part they did so to avoid making an unconservative appraisal of future investment experience. In addition, inflation was not seen as a factor of the importance it has assumed in recent years either in its effect on pension plan benefits or on rates of investment return. Undesirable consequences of making an explicit allowance for future inflation which proved to be unconservative were seen to be:

- the need to increase pension plan contributions in the future.
- reduced funding flexibility because of lower tax deductible limits on plan contributions.

4.5 The greater impact of inflation on pension costs in recent years has led to increasing use of an explicit recognition of inflation in each actuarial assumption, the preferred approach.

4.6 The explicit approach allows each assumption to be judged in the light of the observer's experience and expertise. This is particularly important in the selection of the investment return assumption because of the general public awareness and understanding of investment return. Without explicit recognition of inflation in the investment return assumption:

(i) the expectation from a pension fund's investment policy may be misunderstood;

(ii) erroneous conclusions may be drawn from comparisons between the actuarial investment return assumption and the fund's actual investment performance.

4.7 Other advantages of an explicit approach include:

- the relative cost significance of specific existing plan provisions, and the impact on costs of potential changes in plan provisions will be more accurately portrayed;
- the relationship between each actuarial assumption and the plan's experience with respect to that factor may be more accurately determined; i.e., actuarial gains and losses may be analyzed more effectively;
- the value of optional plan benefits, particularly lump-sum settlements, will bear a more equitable relationship to one another;
- the present value of vested benefits will be more realistically estimated;
- there will generally be a lesser need to change assumptions due to a change in plan design than under the implicit approach;
- since inflation will generally have an impact on several actuarial assumptions, it will be easier and more direct for the actuary to determine (and for his client to understand) that the chosen assumptions represent a proper balancing of the various assumptions involving inflation than under the implicit approach.

4.8 In arriving at an explicit assumption with respect to inflation, the actuary may find it desirable to assume a conservative posture, bearing in mind the degree of uncertainty involved and the potential for adverse fluctuation. It should be recognized that in the absence of automatic postretirement increases, a lower assumed rate of inflation will generally produce a higher current pension cost.

4.9 Because of this built-in margin of conservatism in an uncertain area, and because of historical practice, some actuaries may wish to continue the use of the implicit approach. The implicit method, while not the preferred approach, if properly applied provides an acceptable method of recognizing inflation and should not be equated with nonrecognition of inflation. If the implicit method is used, the actuary must be sure that the counterbalancing effects of inflation on various assumptions are properly reflected in all assumptions, and do not, for example, reflect some element of inflation in the assumed investment return without recognizing it in future salary increases.

SECTION 5. PREDICTABILITY OF INFLATION

5.1 The rate of inflation depends upon general economic factors. The pattern of the general economy is difficult to forecast for any extended period of time and is also subject to government intervention which can significantly alter any underlying long-term pattern or trend.

5.2 Nevertheless, the difficulty of predicting the effects of inflation upon the economy is not an acceptable reason for failing to recognize inflation in actuarial present value calculations. In some instances, it may be appropriate to make several actuarial present value calculations under a variety of inflation assumptions including an assumption of no inflation. In this way, the sensitivity of the results to various assumptions and their interrelationships can be measured against the intrinsic uncertainty of the assumptions.

SECTION 6. RECOMMENDATIONS

6.1 RECOMMENDATION B(1): The actuary should take into account any expected material effects of inflation upon the calculation of actuarial present values and pension plan costs. If the effect of inflation is recognized explicitly, the anticipated effects of inflation should be directly recognized in every actuarial assumption it affects. If the effect of inflation is recognized indirectly, by implicit methods, the actuary should discuss the manner in which inflation is taken into account. (This is necessary since the implicit method tends to mask the extent to which inflation is recognized in the assumptions.)

6.2 Regardless of the method, explicit or implicit, certain assumptions may include planned margins of conservatism, often appearing to be at substantial variance with current, short-term experience. Accordingly, the actuary should discuss the inflation assumptions in greater depth than would be necessary when describing actuarial assumptions with respect to which inflation is not a consideration.

SECTION 7. TRANSITIONAL RECOMMENDATIONS

7.1 An actuary for a plan covering few employees often uses approximations and other special methods of determining present values, in recognition of the administrative expense attendant upon more refined techniques. Little guidance is presently available to aid such an actuary in choosing techniques which will properly reflect this Recommendation. Until appropriate approximation techniques have been developed through actuarial research, it is not feasible to limit the procedures to be used by actuaries for small plans to those procedures recommended above.

7.2 For larger plans, using more sophisticated actuarial procedures, it may similarly be impractical to effect these Recommendations immediately. Reasonable delay is acceptable to allow conversion of existing actuarial techniques to those recommended. In particular, for many plans a review of actuarial procedures and assumptions is undertaken regularly, but less frequently than annually. The adoption of any change in procedures is thus uneconomical except at the time of regular review. In such cases, conformance to these Recommendations should occur at the next regular review date.

INTERPRETATION 1: INTERPRETATION OF RECOMMENDATIONS CONCERNING THE CALCULATION OF THE ACTUARIAL PRESENT VALUE OF VESTED BENEFITS

Recommendation A(6) defines acceptable practice for calculating the actuarial present value of vested benefits of an active plan, as required, for example, by APB Opinion No. 8. The procedures described in paragraphs 5.4 and 5.5 of Recommendation A are intended to produce results consistent with the APB Opinion No. 8 definition:

> "The actuarially computed value of vested benefits, as used in this Opinion [APB Opinion No. 8], represents the present value, at the date of determination, of the sum of (a) the benefits expected to become payable to former employees who have retired, or who have terminated service with vested rights, at the date of determination; and (b) the benefits, based on service rendered prior to the date of determination, expected to become payable at future dates to present employees, taking into account the probable time that employees will retire, at the vesting percentages applicable at the date of determination."

The implication of Recommendation A(6) for an APB No. 8 calculation for an ongoing plan is illustrated by the following example:

(a) Given:

(i) Benefit rate of $10 per month per year of service.

(ii) Normal retirement at age 65, irrespective of service. Retirement not compulsory.

(iii) Unreduced benefits upon early retirement from active employment at age 62 with 20 years of service.

(iv) Unreduced benefits upon early retirement prior to age 62 with 30 years of service. Social Security make-up benefits of $200 per month payable until age 62.

(v) Reduced benefits upon early retirement from active employment after age 55 and prior to age 62 with 20 years of service. Reduction is 4% for each year by which retirement precedes age 62.

(vi) Deferred vested benefit, commencing at age 65, upon termination with 10 years of service. Benefit payments (at full actuarially reduced value) may also be elected to commence as early as age 55 if 20 or more years of service have been completed.

(vii) The actuary uses a full range of decrements including termination rates of all ages below age 65 when not eligible for early retirement, early retirement rates at all ages when eligible below age 65, and normal retirement rates at all ages 65 and over.

(b) The following calculations are intended:

(i) Employee under age 65 with less than 10 years of service—No value.

(ii) Employee under age 65 with 15 years of service—Value deferred benefit of $150 payable at age 65 in case of withdrawal before age 65, or benefit of $150 payable on normal retirement at age 65 or later, using valuation assumptions as to termination rates from present age to age 65 and as to normal retirement rates from age 65.

(iii) Employee under age 55 with 20 years of service—Value deferred benefit of $200 payable at age 65 in case of withdrawal before age 55, or benefit of $200 with full actuarial reduction from age 65 payable on early retirement at ages 55 to 64, or benefit of $200 payable on normal retirement at age 65 or later, using valuation assumptions as to termination rates from present age to age 55, as to early retirement rates from age 55 to age 64, and as to normal retirement rates from age 65.

(iv) Employee age 55 with 20 years of service—Value benefit of $144 (72% of $200) payable on early retirement at age 55 increasing by $8 annual steps to $200 payable on early or normal retirement at age 62 or later, using assumptions as to retirement rates from age 55.

(v) Employee under age 62 with 30 years of service—Value benefit of $300 payable on early or normal retirement plus temporary benefit of $200 payable to age 62 if retiring early before that age, using valuation assumptions as to retirement rates from present age.

(vi) Employee age 62 or over with 20 years of service—Value benefit of $200 payable on early or normal retirement, using valuation assumptions as to retirement rates from present age.

(vii) Employee age 65 or over—Value benefit of $10 per year of service payable on normal retirement, using valuation assumptions as to retirement rates from present age.

(viii) Inactive employee under age 65 separated after 10 years of service—Value deferred vested benefit of $100 payable at age 65.

If benefits payable under the plan prior to normal retirement are provided on an actuarially equivalent basis, calculations may be simplified by applying appropriate deferred annuity values to the accrued monthly benefit. If the plan does provide benefits payable prior to normal retirement date in excess of an actuarial equivalent benefit, calculations may similarly be simplified for those employees who have not attained sufficient age and/or service to qualify for such benefits. In this case also the simplification consists of applying appropriate deferred annuity values to the accrued monthly benefit applicable to such employees.

It should be noted that Recommendation A(6) applies to calculations for an active plan which customarily involve many employees who have not terminated. It is recognized that on occasion computations assuming employment and/or plan termination may be necessary, for example to fulfill plan termination or other requirements of ERISA. Under such circumstances appropriate modifications of the above procedures must be made, as described in Recommendation A(5).

INTERPRETATION 2: INTERPRETATION OF RECOMMENDATIONS CONCERNING THE CALCULATION OF THE ACTUARIAL PRESENT VALUE OF ACCRUED BENEFITS UNDER AN ACTIVE PLAN

I. Recommendation A(7) allows flexibility to the actuary in determining the actuarial present value of accrued benefits under an active plan within the scope of this Recommendation. This Interpretation provides for consistent practice in the determination of the actuarial present value of accrued (or accumulated) benefits which might be disclosed in Schedule B of Form 5500, where required, or in a statement accompanying a plan's financial statements. A comparison of such actuarial present value of accrued benefits with the actuarial value of assets will provide a measure under an active plan of the progress which is being made toward the funding of the benefits which are accruing, according to measurement methods reasonably consistent for all plans. Other actuarial calculations ordinarily are necessary to measure the progress made in meeting the long range funding objectives of the plan sponsor, to ascertain the status of the plan if it were terminated or to determine statutory funding requirements.

(a) The present value of accrued benefits represents the present value, at the date of determination, of (i) the benefits expected to be paid with respect to former employees who have retired or who have terminated service with vested rights; (ii) the benefits expected to be paid to beneficiaries of employees who have died; and (iii) the accrued benefits based on service rendered and compensation earned prior to the date of determination, which are expected to become payable with respect to present employees; taking into account the regular valuation assumptions as to mortality and, in the case of present employees, such other matters as withdrawal, retirement, disability and future service accrual for benefit eligibility.

(b) The accrued benefit related to one contingency may differ from the accrued benefit related to another, e.g., retirement, termination from service and death. The following are guidelines for determining the amounts of accrued benefit.

(i) If the accrued benefit is specifically defined in the plan document or is clearly implied by the plan's provisions, that definition will be followed for the contingencies to which it is applicable.

(ii) If (i) does not apply and the benefit type is includible in the present value of vested benefits, the benefit will be considered to accrue in proportion to the ratio of completed years of benefit service to projected years of benefit service when it first becomes fully vested. Therefore, if an employee has satisfied the requirements for full vesting, the accrued benefit will be computed as in Interpretation 1.

(iii) Any other benefit will be assumed to accrue in proportion to the ratio of completed years of benefit service to projected years of benefit service upon anticipated separation from covered employment.

(c) In the regular valuation of a plan, the actuary may be using an implicit approach to the choice of actuarial assumptions in the selection of the salary increase and investment return assumptions. Inasmuch as the calculations to be performed within the scope of this Interpretation do not involve the anticipation of future salary increases, the actuary should use an explicit approach in his consideration of an appropriate investment return assumption.

The degree of conservatism, if any, which the actuary chooses to reflect in his consideration of an appropriate investment return assumption for the purposes of this Interpretation need not be the same as that reflected in the regular valuation investment return assumption.

(d) Automatic cost-of-living or similar benefit increases specified by the plan and expected to occur after retirement, death or other termination should be recognized, using an inflation assumption which is consistent with the assumed rate of investment return.

(e) Increases in the level of benefits which become effective in the future need not be recognized even though they have already been adopted.

(f) In the determination of Social Security benefits the employee's compensation as of the date of determination should be assumed to continue unchanged during his assumed future service, i.e., until his termination, retirement, etc., according to the actuarial assumptions. Calculations related to the Social Security law should not take into account any changes in the law or increases in the wage base or Consumer Price Index subsequent to the date of determination.

(g) In determining an appropriate actuarial value of assets which may be compared to the actuarial present value of accrued benefits, Recommendation A(10) should be followed.

(h) The actuary may be required, or may feel it is appropriate, to distinguish between the portion of the actuarial present value of accrued benefits which is vested and the portion which is not vested. Interpretation 1 defines acceptable practice for calculating the actuarial present value of vested benefits of an active plan, as required, for example, by APB Opinion No. 8 and should be applied in determining the portion of the actuarial present value of accrued benefits which is vested.

Because a breakdown of the present value of accrued benefits among the plan termination categories under ERISA generally is of little significance for an active plan, it is not intended that such a breakdown will be made in the usual case.

(i) In all cases approximations consistent with Recommendation A(11) may be utilized.

(j) Benefits to be provided under an insurance company contract which are not fully guaranteed by the insurance company should be taken into account in determining the actuarial present value of accrued benefits. Fully guaranteed benefits should be included in or excluded from this calculation, depending on whether or not the assets standing behind these benefits are included in the asset value with which the actuarial present value of accrued benefits is being compared.

(k) The actuary should indicate that the determination of the actuarial present value of accrued benefits has been made in accordance with generally accepted actuarial principles and practices. The sources of the data used in the calculations, as well as the investment return assumption and the other assumptions used should be disclosed. In addition, the actuary should identify any limitation on the use of the calculations for various purposes which he feels are appropriate. Although comparative figures for the current year and prior year should be shown (after the first year the statement is prepared), a complete reconciliation of the actuarial present value of accrued benefits from year to year is not required. However, the impact of significant changes in the actuarial assumptions, plan provisions and Social Security legislation should be disclosed. A sample Statement of Actuarial Present Value of Accrued Benefits and a sample Actuary's Opinion are attached.

II. The application of this Interpretation for determining the actuarial present value of accrued benefits under an active plan is illustrated by the following Examples A and B.

EXAMPLE A

It is assumed that the actuary uses a table incorporating decrements for termination at ages below 55, as well as for death at all ages. Further, all surviving active employees are assumed to retire at age 63 (or attained age, if greater) with unreduced benefits.

(a) Given:

(i) Benefit rate of $10 per month per year of service.

(ii) Normal retirement at age 65, irrespective of service. Retirement not compulsory.

(iii) Unreduced immediate benefit upon early retirement from active employment at age 62 or over.

(iv) Reduced immediate benefit upon early retirement from active employment after age 55 and before age 62 with 20 years of service. Reduction is 4% for each year by which retirement precedes age 62.

(v) Deferred vested benefit, commencing at age 65, upon termination with 10 years of service. Benefit payments (at full actuarially reduced value) may also be elected to commence as early as age 55 if 20 or more years of service have been completed.

(vi) Spouse's benefit upon death in active service after meeting eligibility requirements for early or normal retirement equal to $5 per month per year of service.

(b) The following calculations are intended:

Type of Benefit	Payable Upon Separation From Service at Ages	Amount of Benefit	Benefit Starts At	Duration of Benefit
Age 25 and 5 Years of Service
(1) Deferred Vested	30-54	$ 50	Age 65	Life
(2) Unreduced Early	63	50	Age 63	Life
(3) Spouse	55-62	25	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
Age 40 and 5 Years of Service
(1) Deferred Vested	45-54	$ 50	Age 65	Life
(2) Unreduced Early	63	50	Age 63	Life
(3) Spouse	55-62	25	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
Age 45 and 10 Years of Service
(1) Deferred Vested	45-54	$100	Age 65	Life
(2) Unreduced Early	63	100	Age 63	Life
(3) Spouse	55-62	50	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
Age 50 and 20 Years of Service
(1) Deferred Vested	50-54	$200	Age 65	Life
(2) Unreduced Early	63	200	Age 63	Life
(3) Spouse	55-62	100	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
Age 60 and 10 Years of Service
(1) Unreduced Early	63	$100	Age 63	Life
(2) Spouse	62	50	Death in Service	Life of Spouse

EXAMPLE B

It is assumed that the actuary uses a full range of decrements including termination rates and disablement rates at ages below age 65, early retirement rates at ages when eligible below age 65, and normal retirement rates at ages 65 and over.

(a) Given:

(i) Benefit rate of $10 per month per year of service.

(ii) Normal retirement at age 65, irrespective of service. Retirement not compulsory.

(iii) Unreduced immediate benefit upon early retirement from active employment at age 62 with 20 years of service.

(iv) Unreduced immediate benefit upon early retirement from active employment before age 62 with 30 years of service. Social Security make-up benefit of $200 per month payable until age 62.

(v) Reduced immediate benefit upon early retirement from active employment after age 55 and before age 62 with 20 years of service. Reduction is 4% for each year by which retirement precedes age 62.

(vi) Unreduced immediate benefit upon total and permanent disability before age 65 with 10 years of service.

(vii) Deferred vested benefit, commencing at age 65, upon termination with 10 years of service. Benefit payments (at full actuarially reduced value) may also be elected to commence as early as age 55 if 20 or more years of service have been completed.

(viii) Spouse's benefit upon death in service after meeting eligibility requirements for early or normal retirement (30 years of service, age 55 and 20 years of service, or age 65) equal to $5 per month per year of service.

(b) The following calculations are intended:

Type of Benefit	Payable Upon Separation From Service at Ages	Amount of Benefit	Benefit Starts At	Duration of Benefit
	Age 25 and 5 Years of Service
(1) Deferred Vested	30 - 49	$ 50	Age 65	Life
(2) Unreduced Early	50 - 64	50	Retirement	Life
(3) Social Security Makeup	50 - 61	33*	Retirement	To Age 62
(4) Normal	65 and Over	50	Retirement	Life
(5) Spouse	50 and Over	25	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
(6) Disability	30 - 64	50	Disablement	Life

Type of Benefit	Payable Upon Separation From Service at Ages	Amount of Benefit	Benefit Starts At	Duration of Benefit
Age 40 and 5 Years of Service
(1) Deferred Vested	45 - 54	$ 50	Age 65	Life
(2) Reduced Early	55 - 61	36 at Age 55 Increasing $2 a Year to Age 61	Retirement	Life
(3) Unreduced Early	62 - 64	50	Retirement	Life
(4) Normal	65 and Over	50	Retirement	Life
(5) Spouse	55 and Over	25	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
(6) Disability	45 - 64	50	Disablement	Life
Age 45 and 10 Years of Service
(1) Deferred Vested	45 - 54	$100	Age 65	Life
(2) Reduced Early	55 - 61	72 at Age 55 Increasing $4 a Year to Age 61	Retirement	Life
(3) Unreduced Early	62 - 64	100	Retirement	Life
(4) Normal	65 and Over	100	Retirement	Life
(5) Spouse	55 and Over	50	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
(6) Disability	45 - 64	100	Disablement	Life
Age 50 and 20 Years of Service
(1) Deferred Vested	50 - 54	$200	Age 65	Life
(2) Reduced Early	55 - 59	144 at Age 55 Increasing $8 a Year to Age 59	Retirement	Life
(3) Unreduced Early	60 - 64	200	Retirement	Life
(4) Social Security Makeup	60 - 61	133*	Retirement	To Age 62
(5) Normal	65 and Over	200	Retirement	Life
(6) Spouse	55 and Over	100	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
(7) Disability	50 - 64	200	Disablement	Life
Age 50 and 30 Years of Service
(1) Unreduced Early	50 - 64	$300	Retirement	Life
(2) Social Security Makeup	50 - 61	200*	Retirement	To Age 62
(3) Normal	65 and Over	300	Retirement	Life
(4) Spouse	50 and Over	150	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
(5) Disability	50 - 64	300	Disablement	Life
Age 60 and 10 Years of Service
(1) Deferred Vested	60 - 64	$100	Age 65	Life
(2) Normal	65 and Over	100	Retirement	Life
(3) Spouse	65 and Over	50	Death in Service	Life of Spouse
(4) Disability	60 - 64	100	Disablement	Life

*Because this benefit type is one which is includible in the computation of the present value of vested benefits, the $200 monthly benefit is assumed to accrue uniformly over the first 30 years of service (see 1(b) (ii)). If, on the other hand, there had been specified a benefit which never is includible in the computation of the present value of vested benefits, such as a $200 monthly benefit payable in the event of the employee's death after 30 years of service, the accrued death benefit to be valued in the age 25 and 5 years of service example would have been $33 (5/30 of $200) for death at age 50, $32 (5/31 of $200) for death at age 51, etc.

(c) If, in the example, there were a maximum service limit of 30 years applicable at normal or early retirement or disablement, with a pro-rata portion of the expected normal retirement benefit payable on vested termination, the only changes in the amount of benefit would be for the deferred vested benefit:

Age 25 and 5 Years of Service $ 33 (5/45 of $300)

Age 50 and 20 Years of Service $171 (20/35 of $300)

SAMPLE STATEMENT OF ACTUARIAL PRESENT VALUE OF ACCRUED BENEFITS

XYZ CORPORATION PENSION PLAN

Actuarial Present Value Of Accrued Benefits	January 1, 1980	January 1, 1979
Retired participants and beneficiaries of deceased participants	$ xxx	$ xxx
Terminated participants with vested interests	xxx	xxx
Active participants	xxx	xxx
Total	$ xxx	$ xxx

Notes:

1. The actuarial value of assets, corresponding to the total actuarial present values of accrued benefits, was $xxx at January 1, 1980 and $xxx at January 1, 1979, respectively. The actuarial value of assets is equal to the average market value of assets of the plan as of the computation date and the four preceding January 1's with an adjustment to reflect the cash flow during this period. This formula is used to smooth out fluctuations in the market value of assets, which was $xxx at January 1, 1980 and $xxx at January 1, 1979.

2. A comparison of the actuarial present value of accrued benefits with the actuarial value of assets provides a measure under an active plan of the progress which is being made toward the funding of the benefits which are accruing, according to measurement methods reasonably consistent for all plans. Other actuarial calculations ordinarily are made to determine year-to-year contribution levels.

3. The actuarial values which would apply in the event the plan were terminated would differ from those shown, for many reasons including, but not necessarily limited to, the following:

   (a) Certain plan provisions which may apply in the event of partial or complete plan termination are not reflected in the benefits valued nor in the actuarial assumptions employed.

(b) Vested benefits may be limited with reference to the value of the assets of the fund.

(c) Certain vested benefits may be insured by the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corporation.

(d) Actuarial computations under actuarial assumptions other than those specified herein may be required as a basis for determining plan benefits in the event of a partial or complete termination of the plan.

(e) Benefits deemed already earned may not be the same as those underlying the actuarial values shown.

4. The benefits reflected above have been determined on the basis of the plan provisions in effect on the respective dates. No recognition was given at January 1, 1979 to benefit increases which became effective on October 1, 1979; or at January 1, 1979 and January 1, 1980 to benefit increases scheduled to become effective on May 1, 1980 and May 1, 1981. The amendments effective October 1, 1979 caused an increase of approximately $xxx in the actuarial present value of accrued benefits as of January 1, 1980. Benefits under the plan are based on a participant's compensation during his last five years of credited service. The actuarial present values shown above for active participants are based on estimated average compensation during the five years ending on the respective dates of determination. Benefits payable under all circumstances—retirement, death, disability and vested termination of employment—are included, to the extent that they are deemed to have accrued as of the computation dates.

5. The actuarial present value was determined by the actuary on the basis of employee data supplied by the plan administrator (sponsor), the provisions of the plan as supplied by the plan administrator (sponsor), and actuarial assumptions as described in note 6. The plan administrator (sponsor) has stated that, to the best of his knowledge, the employee data is accurate and complete and that the plan provisions provided the actuary are accurate and complete as of the valuation date. The actuarial value of asset was determined by the actuary on the basis of information supplied by the plan administrator (sponsor).

6. There have been no changes in actuarial assumptions since the previous valuation. The principal actuarial assumptions used in determining the actuarial present values shown are as follows:

Investment return: X% compounded annually (after deducting expenses) Mortality: The _____ Mortality Table. Withdrawal: Rates ranging from X% at age 18 to X% at age 55 and Over. Retirement: Rates ranging from X% at age 48 to X% at age 62, X% at ages 63 and 64, X% at ages 65 through 69 and 100% at age 70. Spouse benefits: X% of men and X% of women married with wife ____ years younger than husband.

SAMPLE ACTUARY'S OPINION

This Statement has been prepared in accordance with generally accepted actuarial principles and practices and, to the best of our knowledge, fairly reflects the actuarial present value of accrued benefits of the (Name of Plan) as of (Date) and (Date).

In preparing this Statement, we have relied upon information provided to us regarding plan provisions, plan participants, plan assets and other matters, as more fully detailed in the notes to the Statement. In particular, we call attention to the fact that information as to (TYPE) has been certified to by (Name of Certified Public Accountants).

The present values shown herein have been estimated on the basis of actuarial assumptions which, in the opinion of the actuary, are appropriate for the purposes of the Statement, are reasonable in the aggregate (taking into account the experience of the plan and reasonable expectations), and, when applied in combination, represent his (her) best estimate of the measure of anticipated experience under the plan.

APPLICATION FOR ADMISSION INTO THE AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ACTUARIES

The requirements for admission to the Academy are set forth in Article I of the Bylaws. An individual who meets the experience and educational requirements and wishes to apply may request an application form from the Administrative Office of the Academy in Chicago.

The application form is designed to develop sufficient information concerning both the applicant's actuarial education and experience in responsible actuarial work to enable the Admissions Committee to determine whether the established requirements for admission are satisfied. The applicant should be sure to give complete information with respect to each section of the application. If insufficient space is provided for this purpose, a supplemental statement should be appended to the application. Applications should be filled in legibly, preferably typewritten.

A nonrefundable application fee of $25 must accompany the application. This is a charge for processing the application and will not be applied toward the payment of dues for those candidates accepted. Application fees paid by candidates who are not accepted will not be refunded.

Applications and all inquiries should be addressed to

AMERICAN ACADEMY OF ACTUARIES
ADMINISTRATIVE OFFICE
208 SOUTH LA SALLE STREET
CHICAGO, ILLINOIS 60604

DUES

Article VII, Section 1 of the Bylaws of the Academy provides that, subject to certain provisions with respect to disability and retirement, each member shall pay such dues for each calendar year as may be established by the Board of Directors of the Academy.

Dues as presently approved by the Board are $125 per year for members, payable on January 1. Admission in the first third of the year will require full payment of dues for that year, admission in the second third of the year will require payment of two-thirds of the annual amount, and admission in the last third of the year will require payment of one-third of the annual amount.
